THE DUSKY RACE.

Condition of the Colored Population of New-York.

Their Numbers, Avocations and Modes of Living.

The Prejudices and Circumstances that Keep Them Down.

Their Churches and Charitable Institutions.

Scenes in a Colored Dance-house—Statistics of Miscegenation.

What is the present condition of the colored people of this City? This is a question which must be interesting to all classes of the community, not only to those who are influenced by general philanthropic motives or those who take an especial interest in the well-being and moral elevation of the negro, but also to those lovers of questions of political economy, who consider that the prosperity of each and every section of society is necessary to the national welfare.

THE COLORED POPULATION.

The colored population of New-York which numbered, according to the census of 1860, 12,000 persons, increased during the first years of the war, from the arrival of contrabands and other causes, to 15,000. After the riotous uprising of the Irish against the colored people at the time of the draft, in July, 1863, many of them left the City for fear of future ill-treatment, and a gradual emigration has been since going on which has reduced their numbers at the present time, according to the calculation of those among them who have the best opportunities of judging, to something near 12,000. This is exclusive of a floating population of seamen, ships' cooks, habitual wanderers, &c., amounting to 2,000 or 3,000. They are thus distributed: In the neighborhood of Mulberry, Crosby, Chrystie, Delancey and Baxter streets, about 1,500; in the Five Points Mission district, about 250; in Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, extending from Fifth-avenue to the North River, nearly 4,500; in the neighborhood of Thompson, Laurens, York, Wooster and Sullivan streets, between Bleecker and Canal streets, and from Bleecker to Eighteenth-street, about 4,500; and some 1,500 scattered indiscriminately over the City. They change their residence so frequently that it is difficult to arrive at a precise estimate of their numbers, but this is believed among their own people to be a fair approximation.

THEIR PURSUITS.

The men are principally occupied as coachmen in private families, waiters in hotels and dining saloons, barbers, whitewashers, bricklayers and kalsominers; while many of them are teamsters and longshoremen, and a few work privately as artisans in different trades. In the Spring, Summer and Autumn great numbers of them go as cooks, stewards and waiters on the various river steamers, many more are employed as waiters in the hotels at the different Summer resorts and watering-places; and such is the exodus produced by these causes that it is computed that there are twice as many more colored men in the City during the Winter months, when the hotels are all closed and the steamers laid up, than there are in the Summer time. This latter class are generally compelled during the Winter to subsist upon what they have been able to save from their Summer earnings; and in cases where they have been improvident, or have not had employment during the entire season, very great distress is often experienced by them.

The principal occupations of the women are washing and ironing—for which they seem to have much aptitude—dressmaking and hairdressing, and a certain number teach in the colored schools. The washerwomen seem, as a class, to be very industriously inclined, and are generally contented with the weekly money they earn. They are compelled of necessity to keep themselves and their places clean, and get up the linen committed to their charge in a style fully equal to their white competitors, and in strange contrast with the dusky color of their skins.

THEIR CHURCHES AND INSTITUTIONS.

In matters of religion, the great bulk of the colored people may be divided into two sections—Methodists and Baptists. The Methodists comprise nearly two-thirds, and the Baptists about one-third, of the whole population; though there are some Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, and Presbyterians. They have two Methodist Episcopalian Churches, each of which has a special section in the cemetery at Cypress Hill for the burial of their people. Zion Church, at the corner of Bleecker and West Tenth streets, of which Rev. WILLIAM F. BUTLER is the pastor, is valued, with the ground on which it stands, at $100,000, and has also real estate belonging to it, in different parts of the City, valued at $100,000 more. There are also two Union Methodist Churches, two Baptist, one Episcopalian, one Presbyterian, and one Methodist Mission. The Roman Catholics are so few in number that they have, as yet, no church of their own, but attend the churches of the whites. The total amount of Church property in this City belonging to the colored people, is valued at $455,000.

Their distinctive institutions are alike various and numerous, and appear to be very well supported by their own people. They have six public schools, an Industrial and Educational School at No. 135 Spring-street, which was opened last Summer, and which is daily crowded with pupils of all ages, from 5 to 50 years, only too anxious to learn something and everything; an Orphan Asylum, capable of accommodating 175 boys and girls, the highest number yet reached; and an asylum for aged people, called "The Old Folks' Home," which contains nearly 200 inmates. They have, moreover, several societies whose objects are relieving the poor, visiting and nursing the sick, burying the dead and reclaiming drunkards. The Society of the Good Samaritan has six lodges and numbers nearly 600 members; the Society of Love and Charity has 250 members. Then there is the Society of the Sons of Wesley, 120 members; the Saloons' Men Society, 200 members; the Coachmen's Benevolent Society, the Young Men's Christian Benevolent Society, and the Mutual Relief Society. These are all of a benevolent character. But these charitable and benevolent associations are by no means confined to the men. Among the women there are the societies of The Daughters of Esther, a very wealthy institution; The Daughters of Wesley, The Female Perseverance, The Ladies' Mutual Relief, The Ladies' Loyal League, The Daughters of Zion, and Tappin's Assistant Society, numbering altogether nearly 2,000 members. There are fourteen lodges of colored Freemasons, with 750 members, but they have no connection with similar associations in New-York. The New-York lodges refused admission to all negroes on the ground of their color, but they succeeded in obtaining a charter direct from the Grand Lodge of England, and are governed by the rules of that Order in that country. The Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, which has four lodges with 350 members, also derives its charter direct from England—the white lodges in this city having declined to acknowledge their colored brethren. They have carried their animosity to such a pitch as to sever their connection with the English branch of the Order, in consequence of their having given a charter to the colored men of this and other cities. The Union League Council, which has 1,800 members, is a purely political club, having for its especial object the obtaining of negro suffrage. There is also a Young Men's Christian Association, consisting of 140 members, which has a reading-room and a lending library. A Literary Society is attached to this institution, under whose auspices courses of lectures on various improving topics are from time to time given. The Freedman's Bank, in Bleecker-street, has now been in operation nearly two years, and has received during that period deposits to the amount of $130,000. At the same time, very many others of the savings banks of the City have the names of colored customers on their books.

The Zion Standard & Weekly Review is a newspaper edited, printed and published entirely by colored men, for the use and benefit of their own people. It is devoted to religion, news, politics, literature, science and the general interests of the African race in this country—religious but not sectarian. Rev. Dr. JAMES N. GLOUCESTER is the chief editor. The paper, which has correspondents in all parts of the United States, from New-England to California, seems to have a fair advertising business, is very well gotten up, and is altogether very creditable to the enterprise of its promoters.

THE PREJUDICE AGAINST THEM.

Throughout the whole of the exploration which I recently made, accompanied by an experienced officer of the Police force, through the quarters of this City occupied by colored people, I met, in every direction, the most startling evidences of the powerful effects of prejudice. Of all the difficulties with which they have to contend, that of prejudice against them for their color's sake throws all others into the shade, and would seem under present circumstances to be almost insuperable. This is a feeling which is bitterly and intensely fostered by the Irish element, and quietly acquiesced in by a very large portion of native-born citizens. If a colored man applies for work at a new job, he always has to wait till the contractor sees whether he can get enough white laborers for his purpose before he is taken on, and it more often happens that he is at once refused employment, simply on the ground of his color, although the contractor who refuses to employ him, may be at the very moment short of his requisite number of hands; and, when he does succeed in getting work, he has to accept lower wages, and is always expected to work harder than a white man, while his fellow-workmen "put upon" him whenever they get the opportunity, and ceaselessly jeer at him and make him the butt of their jokes. To my inquiries, "Why do you not break up this wretched colony and move into more comfortable quarters," one invariable answer was returned: "We find it so difficult to persuade any one to rent us a decent place on account of our color. Hundreds of us would gladly pay twice the rent to live in some more respectable neighborhood; but the landlords will not accept us as tenants on any terms, declaring that, should they let a couple of rooms to a colored man, all their white lodgers would immediately give them notice to leave." It has happened on many occasions that men, who have succeeded in obtaining work at a long distance from their homes in the negro quarters, and who were naturally anxious to remove themselves and their families to the immediate neighborhood of their work, have actually offered to different landlords much more rent than they could possibly hope to get from white men, and have been curtly told: "I never let my rooms to a nigger." The consequence is that the poor fellow often has to walk three miles to and from his work; and three miles is a long distance after a hard day's labor. Again, many members of the Trades Unions refuse to work on a building job if colored men be employed; and the Irish, especially, have often made combinations to compel the masters to discharge them. Neither will they work for masters who take colored apprentices. I was informed by highly respectable persons, who were by no means desirous of glossing over the faults of their people, that they did not know a single workshop in this city where a colored man could get employment as an artisan, however respectable or however clever at his trade he might be, or where a colored lad would be taken as an apprentice.

But this prejudice against the African people, on account of their color, is by no means confined to the laboring classes. Respectable hotels almost invariably refuse to admit colored people within their doors. The proprietors of ice-cream, oyster and dining saloons, and the keepers of liquor stores, even of a second or third rate class, refuse to furnish them with refreshments. Rev. WILLIAM F. BUTLER, pastor of Zion Church, a man of gentlemanly manners and appearance, and of some considerable education, assured me that one day last Summer he entered, in company with Mrs. BUTLER, an ice-cream saloon, by no means a fashionable one, and requested to be supplied with refreshments; in answer to which request he was informed that they were not in the habit of accommodating colored people, and must refuse to serve him. On another occasion, not long ago, Mr. BUTLER walked into a dining saloon on Sixth-avenue, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The place was empty, and he was readily served with dinner, which he partook of, paid for, and departed without a single remark being made by the proprietor. A day or two afterward he repaired to the same saloon, but on this occasion at midday. The dining-room was nearly full of white people. The proprietor immediately walked across the saloon to him, and informed him that he could not dine there at that hour, but if he chose to come later in the afternoon, after all their white customers had left, he would then allow him to be served with dinner, but not before.

Again, some of the theatres refused to admit colored persons at all, while those who do condescend to do so only allow them to sit in one part of the house—the tier of seats immediately beneath the roof. But perhaps one of the most astonishing instances of this prejudice occurred last Summer; and that in a quarter from whence it might have been least anticipated. The Christian Convention of ministers of all denominations, which was then assembled in this City, thought proper to set the bad example of Christian charity and brotherly love to all the world of not inviting their colored brother ministers to attend their sittings.

The only class in this City who appear to be really uninfluenced by this intolerant spirit of prejudice against the color of the negro are the Germans. They seem, as a general thing, to have no objection to let lodgings to them; they willingly employ them and pay them fair wages—quite as much as they would pay a white man of equal skill and powers of work. Moreover, when they do employ a colored man, they treat him properly, and not simply as the nigger.

After making a searching and patient inquiry into the condition, ways and habits of the colored population of New-York, I can come to but one conclusion—that, in spite of all their efforts to the contrary, they are kept back by circumstances over which they themselves have no control; that if they could get rid of this inveterate and all-powerful hostility of the Irish to them, on account of their color, they would soon make rapid progress; but that till that desirable consummation is brought about, they will go on much in the same way as they have done for years past. There are many among them, very intelligent and well-educated men, who are exceedingly anxious to improve the position of their race; but they feel that till this prejudice against color is removed, it is next to impossible to them to achieve any substantial results, and that their efforts are all being wasted. The consequences of this prejudice are daily more and more demoralizing certain classes of them; and many are undoubtedly led into the commission of larceny, and so on to greater crimes, from the evil effect of its influences.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS.

Much stress is laid by some unthinking persons on the unusually heavy proportion of criminals among the colored population of this City. There is no denying that crime does exist among them to a deplorable extent, but not to anything like the amount that is generally supposed. A careful analysis of the official statistics of crime published annually by the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, accompanied by a fair and just consideration of all the circumstances of the case, would, I think, lead unbiased persons to considerably modify their views on this head. I find that during the year 1867 there were no less than 47,313 men and women committed to prison from the different City Police Courts—46,144 whites, or about 5 1-5 per cent. of the whole white population, taking it at 900,000, and 1,169 blacks, or 9¾ per cent. of the whole colored population, taking it at 12,000. This would give very nearly two colored criminals for every white one. But, where due allowance has been made for the fact that the colored population, with few exceptions, are all poor, that numbers of them, however willing they may be to work, find the greatest difficulty in obtaining employment, that there is a terrible amount of ignorance among the lower classes of them, and that they labor under social disadvantages to which no other race in the universe is exposed; and, when we consider that those equally poor among the white population are but a small proportion of its total, (there is, perhaps, no metropolitan city in the world where there is so little real poverty as there is in the City of New-York,) and the great bulk of which contributes but a very small quota to the criminal classes, it must be conceded that the proportion of colored criminals is not greater than, if even so great as, that of the whites; certainly nothing like so great as the proportion of criminals among their great enemies, the Irish, who contributed 21,079 persons to the City prisons during the year 1867, against 15,871 native Americans, 7,336 Germans, 1,421 English, 363 French, 410 Scotch, 228 Italians, and 230 Canadians. The criminal classes are, incontestably, recruited from among the poor and uneducated. Of the 47,313 persons committed to the City prisons in 1867, the degree of education of 255 was unknown; 625 were well-educated; 30,390 could only read and write; 12,604 could only read, and 3,439 could neither read nor write. It would then be a fairer mode of making a comparison between the white and colored criminal classes to take a ratio of proportion of the poor and uneducated in each race, and then to work out the percentage of criminals from that ratio. Moreover, the colored people assert that the offences committed among them are by no means of so serious a character as those committed among the whites; and that whereas many whites somehow or other manage to escape the punishment to which they have rendered themselves liable, no colored man is ever allowed to get off.

Another great disadvantage under which many of them labor, arises from the fact that this species of ostracism from respectable neighborhoods compels numbers of them to reside in the Eighth Ward. In that district they are all packed like sardines in a box, in ricketty old houses, whose walls, floors and staircases are begrimed with dirt and where a decent mode of living is almost impossible; some of the houses being actually unprovided with water-closets of any description. It is hardly to be expected where the common decencies of life cannot be observed, that demoralization and degradation can be avoided. Many of the people are so poor that they are compelled to resort to the pawnshops in the Winter time in order to provide food and fuel for their families; and thus, from want of work, their furniture and clothing go, bit by bit, till there is nothing left for them but the workhouse or a prison. However, this is not the case with all of them, and it is wonderful to see how clean and comfortable many of these poor people will make even the miserable rooms in which they live look. But in these instances I generally found that the man or his wife had employment of some kind or another. It is another example of the old saying, that "misery makes men callous."

COLORED GAMBLERS.

I would divide the colored people into two distinct classes—those who are willing to work, and those who would not work if they could get the opportunity. The first and far larger class are quiet, inoffensive and respectable, and remain at home at night; the second are always in the streets day and night, lounging in and out of liquor-stores, policy-shops and gambling-houses, and have mostly got thief written on their faces. They meet at the various bucket-shops about to plan burglaries and robberies from the person; and when they have succeeded in robbing some store or some unhappy wayfarer, and have converted their plunder into money at the "receivers," they go off to the "faro" or to the "sweat" table to get rid of it, for they are just as inveterate gamblers as their white light-fingered brethren. "Sweat," though a very simple game, is extremely popular among them. The proprietor of the place sits at an oblong table covered with black glaze cloth, surrounded by a crowd of eager and excited victims. Six hollow squares are painted in white on the cloth in a straight line, and in the centre of each square are painted the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. They stake any amount they please, from ten cents to $10, placing their stake on some particular number. They then throw three dice from a box on to the table, and if their number shows uppermost they get back their money and as much more; if not, they lose their stake. I watched the proprietor of one of these tables very narrowly for some time, but could not detect the slightest unfairness on his part. At one of these places a strapping young fellow played till he had lost every cent. He then left the room, but returned in five minutes, saying that he had earned ten cents by helping a man lift a heavy cask into a cart. This sum he also staked, lost it, and again retired, abusing his luck in anything but parlor language. In two or three minutes he returned once more, this time having borrowed ten cents. This he put down on his old number, won, backed his luck, and a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes afterward, when I took my departure, he had several dollar bills in his hand and was still playing. At "faro" they play much higher stakes. The proprietor of one of these tables informed me that on the previous evening he had lost over $300. Nothing seems to put a stop to this gambling. The houses are frequently "pulled" by the Police and shut up, only to be reopened in the nearest alley, or even next door. Not long ago the Police arrested sixty-eight persons in one of these places; the cards, checks, spring-boxes, and all the apparatus for playing, which was beautifully and expensively made, were destroyed, but not the gentleman's business. He has plenty of money, his trade of gambling-hell keeper is sufficiently profitable to stand a loss of this description, and after one of these little accidents, which he looks upon as a part of his business, he obtains a new stock in trade and soon flourishes again. On one of these occasions when one of these houses was "pulled," one of the players, whose occupation was that of a white-washer, on seeing the Police come in, called out somewhat ostentatiously to the proprietor: "Say, boss, where's the old woman gone to; I want to get my money for doing them ceilin's and be off." Unluckily, however, for this cute negro, the ceiling happened to to be a particularly grimy one, and he had to accompany the rest of them to the cells.

COLORED DANCE-HOUSES.

Of course the colored people must have their dance-houses like the rest of the world, though the women are not costumed in the style of Water-street. I went into one of these places in Laurens-street. Passing through a narrow alley into a dirty court-yard, surrounded by tumble-down houses, I ascended four flights of a rickety outside staircase, and found myself in a large, low room, something like an empty carpenter's shop, with a bar at one end, and an orchestra, composed of a banjo, a fiddle, and an awfully shrill piccolo at the other. Every one in the room was colored, and nearly all the girls were smoking the filthiest of cigars. They danced a quadrille, a sort of mixture of every dance under the sun, and then a gentleman volunteered to dance a jig for my especial gratification. His performance was decidedly clever. The rapidity with which he moved his feet, and still managed to keep time to the music, was surprising, and yet, when he had finished his performance, he showed no outward signs of fatigue. The whole thing reminded me much of the children's toy—the figure of a black man at the end of a board with a spring to it, which dances when you tap the board with your fingers. This gentleman insisted upon my joining him in a drink at the bar (at my expense.) Of course I was too wary to do more than sip the stuff the proprietor presented to me, although he assured me that it was the finest "Old Rye" to be found in the City of New-York. I can only say that it enabled me fully to account for the fact mentioned to me by my detective, that the people turn out from this dance-house every morning fighting, quarreling and yelling like madmen.

Turning into Wooster-street, I entered a tenement-house only too well-known in that neighborhood as No. 40. If the builder of this house was anxious to erect a place where thieves could play hide-and-seek, and elude the pursuit of the Police, he has certainly succeeded to his heart's content. On entering I was immediately beset by a bevy of the lowest class of negro prostitutes, but on recognizing the detective who escorted me, in spite of his citizen's dress, they soon made off, not feeling quite sure that some of them might not be "wanted." I should think it would be just about as difficult to catch a burglar in that alley, with its many windings and outside staircases, as it would be to catch a wild cat on the house-tops or a pig with a greased tail.

At the corner of Wooster-street my detective called up a tall, powerful, masculine-looking woman, with an arm that would almost fell a bullock, who was standing at the door of a low liquor store known in the neighborhood as "The African Capitol," which is the favorite resort of the refuse of the colored people, and addressing her, said: "Kate, take your shawl off your head and let this gentleman look at you." She did so, and I was astonished to see that she was a red-haired negress—a dark skin, and hair as red as that of any Celt. She was apparently about seven or eight and twenty, but so whisky-soddened that she might have been younger. This woman gets drunk nearly every night, decoys men into dark alleys under the pretence of prostitution and then robs them. She is the terror of the Police, and knows pretty well every nail in every plank in the cells. This corner is the worst part of the district. There is scarcely a night passes without a disturbance of some kind, when these wretched creatures, infuriated with drinking five-cent tumblers or buckets of what is called whisky (!) are turned out from the Capitol at the hour for closing up.

MISCEGENATION.

In the course of my wanderings through the negro quarters, I was particularly struck with the fact that, whereas I found numerous cases of white women living with colored men, (one gentleman I came across luxuriating in two, who happened to be fighting at the moment of my visit,) I did not find a single instance of a white man living with a colored woman; and strange to say, in all the cases of miscegenation which I met with, the women seemed to have picked out the lowest and the most brutal-looking men that they could possibly find.

It is difficult adequately to express the wide margin existing between the highest and lowest class of negroes. They must be seen in their own homes and haunts in order to properly appreciate the difference. The bulk of them, I am inclined to think, have all the elements in them of useful citizenship. Many among them, if they had but a fair chance, would assuredly make a name and a position for themselves, while others are congenitally of so low a type of intellect, and consequently of such low habits, both mental and bodily, as to be little better than mere animals. The more intelligent and thoughtful among the colored people seem to think that little can be done with the present generation, whose better instincts they declare have been ground out of them by tyranny. They centre all their hopes and wishes on the coming one, and spare no pains to improve and educate the children. G.

AFFAIRS IN GEORGIA.

The Reports of the Finance Committee on the Governor's Unauthorized Drafts—The Minority Report Adopted—The Quarrel Between the Radicals and Conservative Republicans.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sunday, Feb. 21, 1869.

The Legislature and the politicians assembled here have been very busy during the week, but no business of any kind has been done. The reports of the majority and of the minority of the Finance Committee on the Governor's drafts for $35,000, and the squabble between the Radical and Conservative Republicans as to the present condition of Georgia, have been the leading topics of interest, and have caused considerable excitement among those immediately concerned. The majority report finds that the Governor used the money without authority of law, but that he did not do so corruptly; that the purpose for which he illegally drew the money, (namely, to enable a contractor to heat, light and ventilate in the most expensive manner the building which he had leased to the City Council of Atlanta, and of which the Council had contracted to give the use to the State Legislature and public offices for ten years "free of all cost to the State,") did not justify any stretch of his powers; that the precedents cited by the Governor in his justification—the case of Lieut.-Gov. HERSCHEL V. JOHNSON sending $25,000 to the Mayor of Savannah to relieve the inhabitants of that city in time of pestilence, and the case of Lieut.-Gov. BROWN ordering the Superintendent of the State Railroad to pay over to the Commissary General $100,000 to buy salt during the war, when the people were suffering from its want,—do not apply to the present case; that the Committee are "still willing to repose a generous confidence in the Governor," but that they recommend the passage of a law "defining more clearly the duties of the Governor and of the Treasurer, and giving the Treasurer the exclusive power of negotiating State bonds." The minority report finds that the Governor expended $35,000 of the State funds "without authority of law;" that he did not in his annual message, nor has he since, officially communicated the facts to the Legislature connected with "the unauthorized expenditure;" that the Legislature at its last session distinctly refused to make an appropriation to buy the heating apparatus for which the money is said to have been expended, and that the outlay was "reckless extravagance." The minority then warmly commend Treasurer ANGIER for his vigilance, recommend the passage of "further legislation for the security of the Treasury," and advise that no appropriation be made to cover KIMBALL'S bill for heating, &c., toward which the Governor has already paid $21,000. That the building belong to the State there makes no less objection to the expenditure, but it is only provided for the State Governments for a few years by the City Government of Atlanta, who, to induce the Convention to remove the Capital from Milledgeville to this place, agreed to furnish accommodation for the General Assembly and State officers, free of any cost whatever, for a specified time. If any expenditure were to be made, it was Atlanta and not the State which should have authorized it; but Atlanta refused and the Legislature tabled the proposition to buy the steam-heating apparatus. Herein lies the gravamen of the Governor's offence.

It is tolerably certain, from the prompt adoption of the minority report and the refusal to reconsider, that the Legislature will not make an appropriation to cover the expenditure, and that the Governor will be held responsible, and either induce the KIMBALLS to refund, or the City Government to pay the money for their building. Politics had nothing whatever to do with either report. Parties are equally represented in both reports, and among the extreme Radicals the Governor has much more bitter assailants than among the most pronounced Democrats.

The squabble among the Radicals and the Conservative Republicans, is of the bitterest. Both factions are angry beyond measure, and denounce each other in unmeasured language. Mr. J. L. DUNNING, a most fanatical Radical, in favor of BROWNLOW'S plan for the extermination of all ex-rebels, heads the extreme Radicals, and Mr. FARROW, the State Attorney-General, is his principal coadjutor. They had a meeting last Monday and adopted a series of resolutions in the sense of Mr. BULLOCK'S memorial and asking Congressional interference. The Conservative Republicans, of whom Mr. J. R. PARROTT, President of the State Convention, Mr. BRYANT, and Dr. BARD, of the Atlanta Era, are the leaders, intended to have another meeting for the purpose of resolving the exact opposite of all the Radical statements, but Mr. DUNNING, and a large number of negroes, took possession of the hall before the hour of meeting and drove the Republicans, their band and their friends from the field in the utmost confusion, and with an uproar rarely equaled even in Congress.

The amusing feature of this domestic difficulty is that each of the disputants expresses perfect confidence in being able to "make GRANT support" his view. DUNNING swears by all that's holy and wonderful, he will "make GRANT upset the whole concern within thirty days," and PARROTT, BRYANT and BARD swear by their innocence, (the most prominent of their many virtues,) that they will make GRANT leave things as they are.

From all I can see and hear the split is not to be mended. DUNNING is as firm as the rock of Gibraltar, and PARROTT as immovable as the peak of Teneriffe. What DUNNING says is black, PARROTT insists is white. What FARROW says is rebel, BARD asserts is loyal, and what ONEAL declares is illegal, BRYANT holds to be in strictest conformity with the letter and spirit of the law. The fact is FARROW, DUNNING & Co. want "a new deal," and PARROTT, BRYANT & BARD, having good hands are satisfied to "play them out." The Democrats stand off and are amused, hoping that the old story of the Kilkenny cats may be renewed practically.

The Governor's veto of the joint resolution referring the question of negro eligibility to the Supreme Court has not caused much excitement. Nobody seemed to care, and many are glad that the resolution has been thus strangled. It was thought that the Governor did not act sagaciously by vetoing the resolution, and that as a partisan he would have done better to allow the reference and then have seen whether the Democrats would have stood by the decision, which would almost certainly have been in favor of the negroes.

The Legislature talks of adjourning, and will some day or other, it is hoped; but it is not easy to part with $9 per day, very little to do, and the "White Fawn" in the evening, with free tickets on all the railroads. QUONDAM.

INDIANA.

Criminal Affairs in Indiana—Twenty-one Murders in Ten Days—The Corwin Mystery—Was a Woman at the Bottom of it?—Interesting Developments of the Clem Trial—The Congressional Election in the Eighth District.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Wednesday, Feb. 24, 1869.

The extraordinary prevalence of crime in nearly all parts of our State still continues to engross the public mind in Indiana. Twenty-one murders were committed in Indiana in the course of the past ten days. In ten of these cases only were the murderers arrested; in five others they were well known to the authorities, but succeeded in making good their escape, and in six cases the assassins are not even known, and all efforts to detect and apprehend them have been fruitless.

THE CORWIN MYSTERY.

No one knows up to the present time who it was that assassinated THEODORE N. CORWIN, the conductor of the Toledo and Wabash Railroad, at Peru, on the night of the 11th of February, under such exceedingly mysterious circumstances, and, as it would seem at first bluah, without any provocation whatever. No murder has ever excited more sensation and indignation all over Northern Indiana than this bloody deed. Large rewards were offered both by the Sheriff of Miami County and the Toledo and Wabash Railroad Company already a few hours after the fatal shots had been fired, for the apprehension of the murderer; and skillful and energetic detectives, earnestly assisted by a great many employes of the aforesaid railroad company and the citizens of the surrounding country in general, started immediately in pursuit of the assassin. During the whole of last week no stone was left unturned to ferret out this bold and bloodthirsty criminal; but he succeeded in baffling his pursuers, who followed him as far as Rochester, in Fulton County, but were then utterly unable to find out in what direction he had continued his flight. It is now almost generally admitted that there is but very little prospect even of ascertaining who the murderer of Conductor CORWIN was. Among the many rumors which are current in this part of the State as to the motives that led to this mysterious assassination, ("the Rogers affair" of Indiana, as it is called here,) there is one which, if well grounded, would add greatly to the tragical character of the crime. It is said that CORWIN, the victim of the unknown assassin, though a married man, had for some time previous to his death kept up a liaison with a married woman of bad repute in this city, and that the husband of the woman, after warning him repeatedly not to visit and follow her any longer, finally threatened to shoot him at sight; and that the murderer was no other than this exasperated husband. There are certain circumstances that would seem to confirm the suspicion that revenge was the motive of the assassination of THEODORE N. CORWIN, and that there must have been a previous difficulty of some kind between the unknown murderer and his victim. At any rate, the words which the stranger addressed to CORWIN a moment or two before commencing to fire at him, "You don't know me, do you? Well, look at me, then!" point very strongly in this direction. Young DURBON, who was at first suspected of being the murderer, has succeeded in proving his entire innocence of the crime; not only did he clearly prove an alibi, but the hat which the murderer had left behind did not fit him, and JEFFERSON CORWIN, the victim's brother, who grappled with the murderer after he had fired the fatal shots at the conductor, declared very positively, on being confronted with DURBON, that he was not the man.

INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS OF THE CLEM TRIAL.

The second trial of Mrs. CLEM, the so-called Cold Spring murderess, has attracted very large crowds to the hall of the Criminal Court, at Indianapolis, during the whole of last week, and, as regards thrilling and dramatic incidents, few of our Indiana causes célèbres ever gave rise to more of them than the new trial of this delicate and prepossessing woman, who, as the prosecuting attorney stated in so many words in his opening speech to the jury, fired the bullet which killed Mrs. YOUNG, a few minutes after one of Mrs. CLEM'S accomplices had shot JACOB YOUNG, the husband of the poor lady. ABRAMS and HARTMANN, the two accomplices of Mrs. CLEM, contrary to general expectation, did not turn State's evidence; but the prosecuting attorney presented this time a by far stronger array of proofs against the prisoner than at her former trial. The witness PIERSON, who, it was proved, had been spirited away from Indianapolis by the friends of the prisoner during her former trial, not only exposed the disreputable means by which he had been kept from testifying against Mrs. CLEM, but swore positively that he saw her and her brother on the afternoon of the 12th of September, 1868, a short time after the YOUNGS had been murdered at Cold Spring, driving at a very rapid rate in a buggy from that place to Indianapolis. A boy, who at the first trial of Mrs. CLEM had failed to identify her positively, now swore that she certainly was the woman whom he had seen driving in the direction of Cold Spring with JACOB YOUNG and his wife, less than hour before the murder was committed. A lady testified that Mrs. CLEM offered to give her $500 if she would swear that she saw the prisoner (Mrs. CLEM) at her house in Indianapolis at the very time when the murder was committed at Cold Spring—an offer which she indignantly rejected. Public opinion was already very strongly against the prisoner before her second trial commenced; but the conviction of her guilt has now become so universal that not only is a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree against her everywhere considered a foregone conclusion, but a storm of indignation would burst forth if the jury should fail to convict her or find her guilty only of murder in the second degree, or of manslaughter. Mrs. CLEM herself seems to share in the general opinion that the jury will find her guilty and send her to the scaffold. Her demeanor, which during the whole of her first trial and at the beginning of the present proceedings, was that of utter indifference, which superficial observers regarded as a strong symptom of her innocence, but which subsequent events have shown to be a mere mask, underwent a marked change since the additional proofs of her guilt were laid before the jury. On the third day of her second trial she became very nervous and agitated; she seemed to be overwhelmed with terror when the witness PIERSON testified against her; and on Friday last she became so unwell that she had to be removed from the Court-room. The most important witnesses for the defence, who were examined yesterday and day before yesterday, did not improve the prospects of the prisoner at all, and a great many people believe that Mrs. CLEM, when she sees that her chances are utterly hopeless, will confess everything and thereby try to obtain some mitigation of her punishment.

THE CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION IN THE EIGHTH DISTRICT.

Hon. JAMES N. TYNER, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Eighth District, has been elected by over 3,300 majority over S. A. HALL, the candidate of the Democracy, to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Hon. D. D. PRATT to the United States Senate. The Democrats tried to lead the Republicans of the district to believe that they would support Judge HORACE P. BIDDLE, a well-known Radical of considerable popularity, who they said had consented to run as an independent candidate. This dodge they hoped would draw off votes enough from Mr. TYNER to elect the real Democratic candidate, Mr. HALL, whose candidature was kept secret almost up to the day of the election. This little piece of strategy, however, was utterly unsuccessful, Judge BIDDLE promptly exposing it and calling upon his friends to stand by Mr. TYNER. The largely increased majority by which the latter was elected on Saturday, shows how demoralized the Democrats of Indiana have become under the management of their present party leaders, who, with the most inexplicable blindness and obstinacy, refuse to see that a party which still persists in embracing every opportunity of paying homage to the shining lights of the Sons of Liberty of 1864, and to vilify the soldiers of the Federal armies and their achievements in the late war, can never triumph in this State. It is but a few days fered the Common Pleas Judgeship in that district the leading Democrats of Fort Wayne of- to the notorious LAMBDIN P. MILLIGAN, whose incarceration in the Columbus State Prison in consequence of his conviction before a Military Commission at Indianapolis gave rise to the celebrated decision of the United States Supreme Court; and on Friday last the Democratic Senator from Knox County, (VINCENNES,) one of the most prominent leaders of the Indiana Democracy, said in a speech in the State Senate, during the debate on the Agricultural College bill, in the presence of a large audience, that, as far as he was concerned, he would like to locate the Agricultural College at Fort Wayne or in Orleans County to do homage to Messrs. MILLIGAN and BOWLES, two of the leaders of the Sons of Liberty of 1864.

THE LEGISLATURE.

I have very little to add to what I wrote you in my last letter in regard to the results obtained up to this time at the present session of the Indiana Legislature. The proceedings, as a general thing, have been very lively and interesting; but very little has been accomplished thus far, and there is reason to fear that the session will be one of the most barren and unsatisfactory that have taken place for a great many years past.

CROP AND BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

The farmers in all parts of the State are radiant with joy at the heavy fall of snow, which has taken place day before yesterday and yesterday throughout Indiana, and which vastly improves the prospects of a good wheat crop. An unusual breadth of wheat was sown last Fall, and the snow has just come in the nick of time to protect it from the occasional cold snaps peculiar to the climate in Indiana toward the close of the Winter. The hopeful feeling now prevailing among our farmers, coupled with the improved state of national affairs under the incoming Administration, exercises a very favorable influence on our business prospects. Our Indiana merchants look for an excellent Spring trade, and they will this time lay in much larger stocks of goods than they did for several years past. W. C.

The Chinese Habeas Corpus Cases in San Francisco.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Feb. 1.

The Courts have much trouble at the present time in adjusting the relations between some of the 250 China women who arrived on the last steamer from Hong Kong and their countrymen in this city. The Chinese have an exalted idea of the efficacy of the writ of habeas corpus, and attachment on civil process. Just now they employ the former. On Saturday, at 4 o'clock P. M., two women appeared before the Fourth District Court, who were claimed by four husbands. Two of the latter were recent arrivals from China, and the other two live here. It appeared in evidence that the women had been abducted and sold to purchasers, who went immediately before Judge PENNIE and were married according to the "Melican" style. The women were sworn, and when one of them was asked which husband she would go with, she answered both. The interpreter explained to her that that would be bigamy, a thing which the Court would not sanction. She must choose only one. Her first love seemed most enduring, and she tried to fall into the arms of her "precedent lord;" at all events, she chose him. The next woman abducted manifested a desire to go with both husbands, but finding that impossible she preferred the old one. The parties were then dismissed. Similar writs have been sued out by husbands and other relatives of more women from the same recent invoice, and they will probably be permitted to designate the persons with whom they prefer to live, or who have the best prior right to their custody.

Twenty-three delegates to the Pennsylvania Democratic Convention are instructed to vote for GEORGE W. CASS for candidate for Governor, six for Judge PACKER, three for Gen. MCCANDLESS, and sixty-one are not instructed. Forty are yet to be chosen.

OUR WORKING CLASSES.

The Sailors and their Hardships on Shore.

Rapacity and Outrages of the Land-sharks.

Terrible Condition of Sailors' Boarding-houses.

How Sailors are Decoyed and Swindled.

We have from time to time during the present year exposed the practices of the land-sharks upon sailors arriving in this port, and have endeavored to put the blame for this condition of affairs where it properly belongs—on the Government and shipowners. The strong representations made by various of our reporters and contributors, writing from actual observation in the sailors' district, have led to the inauguration of the present very peculiar strike on the part of the sailors. Their strike is not only for better wages, but for legal protection from shipping masters and boarding-house keepers. They demand not only better wages, but that shipowners and captains shall deal directly with them, and that the Government shall enact a law for their protection. The boarding-house keepers endeavored to control the strikers in the commencement of the present movement, but the sailors were wise enough to avoid them, and organize an association for their mutual protection. A mass meeting of the sailors was held on Feb. —, and their grievances were fully set forth by those fully acquainted with them. The history of the systematic frauds practiced by the land-sharks, and the indifference of the shipowners and Government agents to their condition, is one horrible and incredible story of inhumanity, cruelty and neglect, which ought to excite the astonishment and move the indignation of the country.

The sailors' district of New-York lies chiefly in the Fourth Ward, the majority of the houses being in Cherry, Oliver, Hamilton, Roosevelt, Oak and Water streets, though boarding-houses are to be found scattered along the docks of East and North Rivers generally. Most of the buildings facing the docks of New-York are small, old-style brick dwellings, many of them built a century ago, and being not only irregular in size but varied in architectural design, they present a grotesque and by no means imposing appearance. Business men have appropriated the great majority of those below Fulton-street, but frequent drinking saloons of the lowest order are always to be found open, and a few scattered private boarding-houses for seamen yawn to swallow up the poor victims who are landed daily at their doors. The majority of these latter establishments are, however, to be found north of Fulton-street. There are in this district of the City no less than 169 of these private boarding-houses for sailors, in which 15,000 seamen are annually robbed of at least $3 lord that the keepers had cast over 2,000 sailors' votes in the Fourth and Sixth Wards at the Presidential election of 1868. They boasted that numbers of large ships, with their cargoes in them, lay at the docks and anchored in the Bay for nearly a month, waiting for the crews which were detained here to influence the election of Governor of the State. The keepers, thus armed with the power to influence the City, and sometimes the State election, can laugh to scorn the power of any State Commission or City officials.

THEIR EXTERIOR.

The exteriors of the boarding-houses for sailors are repulsive enough, but one must explore them thoroughly if he would gain any idea of their horrible character. We found, after several visits with policemen and as a private citizen, that nothing of the real nature of the houses and inmates could be learned in that way. On the first round of visits we were severally mistaken for a health officer, a golporteur and a detective; we were accused at one house of a wish to christianize the women, or at least "leave some waste paper," as they denominate tracts and Bibles; at another we were ordered off the premises on suspicion of being a reporter, and in each case it was intimated that if we did not "come to spend greenbacks we were not welcome." For health officers and detectives they have a wholesome dread. We at length determined, in order to see the interior arrangements of the houses, to go in disguise, and managed to see the interior of more than one of the establishments where they had not on their best face.

While very few of the buildings have more than two stories and basement, they are fitted up to accommodate a great number of persons. Rooms which were originally fifteen or twenty feet square, have been divided into four, small, close and dismal; or else, left their original size, are crowded with beds and cots enough for twice or thrice the number intended. Often in a room with not more than sufficient ventilation for two, eight and ten persons are stowed away in beds whose linens are damp with filth and alive with vermin. Innocent of carpet or oil-cloth, barren of curtains or mirrors, they have the desolate appearance of a prison cell. In each of the several bedrooms which we saw there was displayed one decoration—a cheap print of some Catholic saint or of the Virgin, before which the inmates of the houses daily and nightly repeat unmeaning prayers. In the dance-room, which is the parlor of the establishment, and to which all visitors "who," as one of the most notorious of the keepers expressed it, "come to spend greenbacks are welcome," the only pieces of furniture are a rude bench extending around the room, and a table which is at once the platform on which the musician is elevated and the liquor ordered by the dancers is deposited. The music and the liquors are equally indifferent; the only worse thing to be found in such houses is—character. There is no comparison which will illustrate the quality of the latter. The proprietors are of that wily class whom the law is always pursuing but never catches; burglars and murderers at heart denied by a merciful nature the ingenuity or courage to pursue those callings. Their runners or touters, as they are called, are men who have been driven from every respectable employment for the commission of every species of petty crime. The women are old and faded creatures—most pitiful and unsightly wretches—whom lack of virtue and love of liquor have united to degrade to the lowest depths of humanity. The runner, if found without employment and money, would be arrested as a vagrant; the women who here are shameless in their exposure of themselves, would be arrested in any house which had not the magical license of the Police Commissioners as a protection. The landlords are preëminently hypocrites, careful to give the law no hold upon them. For the more open and bold robberies they commit, the women pay the penalty if any is exacted; the actual thief, the hypocritical landlord, appears in Court to thank the Judge for punishing the thief and redeeming the character of his house.

HOW SAILORS ARE DECOYED.

The means by which sailors are lured to these dens are as curious as they are infamous. When a vessel returning from a long voyage enters the Lower Bay, the Sandy Hook Telegraph Company announces her approach to New-York for the benefit of four classes—the Quarantine officers, active to discover disease; the Customs inspectors, eager to detect smugglers; citizens solicitous to welcome friends, and touters, anxious to decoy sailors to their masters' dens. The Treasury rules provide that from the time the Quarantine officers begin their examination in the Lower Bay until the inspection of the Customs officers is finished at the dock, no other persons than the Government officers and pilot shall board a vessel entering the harbor. The New-York State law of 1866, alluded to as having been passed for the better protection of the seamen in this port, especially prohibits owners of seamen's boarding-houses from boarding a ship before she has been made fast to the wharf, and not then without leave in writing from her owners or agents, or without a badge denoting his calling and giving him a designated number by which he may be known. In the enforcement of this special regulation and the law, respectable citizens are forbidden to communicate with their friends; an iron railing or wooden gate prevents parents from embracing long-absent children; even hand-shaking through the bars is prohibited, lest through this expression of affection the Government may be swindled by a smuggling operation. But while State laws and Treasury regulations are strictly enforced against respectable citizens incapable of knowingly violating them, they are dead letters to the combined rascals known as touters, and who are known to be leagued with the smugglers. The touters are permitted to board—or rather they are not prevented from boarding any vessel at any hour they choose, in open defiance of the law; and numbers of them from their stations on Staten Island, flock to incoming ships when at Quarantine landing, or immediately after entering the Narrows. No one attempts to prevent their coming and going at pleasure. They have no fear of the Revenue cutters as the smugglers have, and to all appearances the cutters have no eye for the touters as they have for the professional smugglers. Few Captains of ships have the moral courage to forbid them from boarding their vessels.

"Why," we asked a sea Captain who had been detailing to us the manner in which the touters operated, "why cannot you forbid them from boarding you? Why cannot the law be enforced?"

"Because the law will not protect the Captain in the performance of his duty," was the answer. "If I attempted to enforce it on my ship, I should have to fight not only the runners but the crew. After a long voyage, the sailor becomes very insubordinate when he gets in sight of port; and to order off these men who come as the friends of the crew—they are not always very good friends, but they are often the only ones who do come to meet the sailers—would be to exasperate the crew. Then I should have the touters to fight the moment I landed, and I doubt if a Captain's life would be safe if he offended them. I do know, however, that if I was to reverse my disposition and intention to prohibit runners from boarding my ship, I would very probably not have a ship long. My owners would have to discharge me as a sort of Jonah. So formidable is the combination among the runners, the boarding masters and shipping masters that if I were to offend one class of them they could prevent me from getting a crew, and my ship would have to lie idle until my owners dismissed me and got a more politic Captain."

Once on board the ship the touters are permitted to mingle freely with the crew, and to express themselves in the most friendly language. The touters are generally employed for their plausible manner; the title is an expression of this quality, being an English slang phrase for a "good talker," and is one of praise given by the employer rather than of reproach bestowed by the victim. They offer the crew their services not only in obtaining their boarding-houses, but in securing their early discharge and immediate payment of their wages. The dark side of the prospect Jack does not stop to think of—if he does contemplate it it is dismissed from his mind as unavoidable, and he makes the best of the hard fate before him. Money he knows he must have to live elsewhere: money he must have to enjoy his freedom ashore; and the touter's friendly offer of a home, immediate liberty from ship discipline and liberal money advances are temptations too great for poor Jack to resist, and he falls a helpless victim into the hands of the land-sharks. He is made helpless by the laws that protect a great interest rich enough to take care of itself. The law which enables the ship owners to deny the sailor his wages when due him is the primary and direct cause of the sailor's troubles ashore. No other class of laborers is imposed on in this way by the law; and it is the existence of this and the non-existence of other provisions to be pointed out, which makes the United States the cruelest enemy of her sailors.

The moment the discipline of the ship is cast off, with a shout of glee Jack enters into the bondage of landlordism. If he could foresee the fate before him he would leave the ship with a sigh of pain. The freedom of the boarding-house is far more terrible than the slavery of the ship. Before he reaches the boarding-house he is in debt deeper than all the worldly possessions in his box will cancel. If his ship anchors in the stream he is charged three dollars for the hire of the small boat which carries him and his box ashore; five dollars more is added for the fee of the runner who guides him to the house. His name is entered on the books of the landlord only that he may be charged with these amounts, and one other—also an inevitable expense. It is the tax he pays for admission to the house. The moment he enters a house the sailor, in accordance with an established custom, "stands treat" for all present. "Come up, gentlemen," exclaims the landlord, "and drink Jack's welcome; he 'stands treat.'" And the cost of the liquors for the men present and for all the women in the house, is added to the indebtedness of the sailor.

Thus, before he is fairly installed in his new quarters, he is heavily in debt,—fast in bondage. To obtain a meal, a bed, or money, Jack must submit to these charges, and not only place his box of clothing, &c., in the hands of the landlord, but he is often compelled to give the ample security of a written order or power of attorney to the landlord to collect his pay. From this time forward, he is the slave of the landlord, and cannot, by any chance, get away from his prison-house while his money lasts. We learned of instances where the wily landlord had collected, but never admitted the receipt of the sailor's pay until it was spent; and all the time that it lasted, he was advancing the sailor small sums out of his own money, and charging heavy interest. As a general thing, sailors draw their own pay, but the landlord to whom he is indebted, stands by to secure his claim; and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the whole sum passes into the landlord's hands. And never leaves it; all is absorbed in board and dissipation. Frequently sailors land at this port after long voyages with from $150 to $200 due them, and if they fall into the hands of the land-sharks they are not only not allowed to see it except as the landlords choose to advance it in driblets, but they are actually prevented from shipping again until the whole of it is spent. They may not remain in port a week,—often the demand for crews is so great that good seamen remain on shore but a few days,—still they find the balance at the landlord's is against them; the whole sum due him is declared absorbed by false and exorbitant charges for board, &c. Often the landlord's charges for a week exceed the earnings, of a cruise; and the sailor goes as pennyless on board his new ship as he was when he came from his last.

Many of these poor fellows returning from a long cruise to the East Indies leave the ship and follow the runner to a boarding-house with the intention of remaining until their wages are paid,—two or three days at the furthest, they sanguinely believe,—when they propose to go to their homes to visit parents or wives. But once under the influence of the boarding-house the sailor never escapes its bondage; he leaves his den only for the forecastle of a new ship, and instead of visiting home and relations he finds himself on a cruise abroad to meet only strangers. Often sailors who have friends not twenty miles distant reach this port after a six months' cruise, remain a week and depart without seeing or hearing from or writing to them. The aim of the landlord is to sever, as far as possible, all home ties of the sailor; he destroys thereby an influence which leaves his victim more helpless than ever. Many of the sailors—probably a majority of them—are from the interior districts. The sea has a strange fascination for those who have never seen it, and it is almost invariably the country lads who run away to become sailors. They thus become separated by a great distance from their relatives, and often the ties of relationship are wholly severed.

Any one familiar with the criminal records of this City will not fail to recall numerous instances of escaped criminals found in these localities. The sailors' district is a favorite hunting-ground of the Police and Detectives. But though many are arrested here, great numbers escape through the agency of the landlords, being shipped by them as sailors. Their booty, too, it often sent to these places for disposition or to be sent abroad. During the war hundreds of men were tempted to desert the army, and were shipped by the landlords without knowing any part of a sailor's duty.

In the same manner important witnesses in important litigations involving large sums of money, and sometimes life are spirited away and indefinitely detained in the East Indies or Europe.

A SPECIMEN OUTRAGE.

One of the most common and painful frauds perpetrated by the "land-sharks," and one which is an outrage on the sailor and damaging to the marine service, is that of inducing foreign sailors to desert their ships. This they are sometimes induced to do and enter boarding-houses in this port, even when they know that they will lose what wages are due them. English sailors who ship from London or Liverpool, and receive, as is at present customary, one month's pay in advance, have very little due them on arrival here. They are induced to forfeit this, break their contract and desert their ship on representations by the landlords that the demand for seamen is great, advances large and shipping brisk. They desert, and enter a boarding-house. "I have had 'em steal my men off the ship at night," said an English captain in explaining how this fraud was perpetrated. Once in the hands of the landlord they are kept if they have any money until it is absorbed, and then, allowed to ship, are robbed of the advance wages paid them. Of course, seamen who can be induced to do this are worthless characters, who disgrace the navy into which they enter. The English laws guard against this fraud by requiring each sailor in shipping to produce his certified discharge from the last ship he served in. The United States has no such safeguard, and the consequence is that its merchant marine receives the deserters of the British merchant service. In being thus deluded, the sailor not only loses the wages due by his foreign captain and is robbed of the advance paid when he is reshipped on an American vessel, but he forfeits his nationality and the protection of his flag, and gets no protection from that under which he enlists, for the reason that it extends none.

The maritime laws of most countries forbid the discharge of a sailor in any foreign port. An American captain engaging a crew in New-York, cannot legally discharge his men at Liverpool or Bremen or New-Orleans, but must retain their services until he returns to New-York. But often our captains abroad, and foreign captains here, when they are to remain in port for some weeks, evade the law, and by collusion with the landsharks, force their crew to desert. Sometimes it is done by ill-treating the men,—compelling them to do hard and useless labor, and ill-feeding them. Oftener it is by confederating with the landlords, or some one of the numerous lawyers who pretend to look after the interests of sailors.

This swindle is sometimes practiced by American captains with American crews, in foreign ports. The United States laws require captains to give security that they will return each sailor shipped by them to the port from which he sailed, but he may, with the consent of the sailor and approval of the United States Consul, discharge a seaman abroad on paying him two months' extra pay and donating one month's pay to the fund for aiding destitute sailors, which the Government maintains in every port. By collusion, however, with the shipping masters in American ports, captains sometimes secure shipping articles from sailors, binding them without their knowledge, to go to other ports than that agreed upon. When he arrives out and asks for his discharge, the sailor is told that he is bound by his articles to go to other and distant ports. The captain expresses a willingness to compromise, and offers to release the sailor on the forfeiture of the wages due him for the current month. If he consents he is taken to the Consul's office, and is thus robbed of one month's pay as forfeit and the two months' wages which the law requires the Captain thus discharging shall pay. The sailor is not the only person thus robbed. The fund for the relief of destitute sailors, or in other words the United States which has to sustain this fund, is robbed of the one month's wages which the Captain is required to pay.

When the landlord has secured the sailor's last dollar and has the prospect of a goodly portion of his expected advance, he relinquishes him to the shipping masters, much as the carrion of greater size and fiercer natures abandon a well-picked carcase to the lesser birds of prey. There are about thirty firms engaged as shipping masters in this City, and, leagued with the landlords, they control the important matter of shipping sailors in this port. Their mode of procedure is not so varied, nor the fraud so extensive as that of the boarding-house keepers. A Captain, having secured his cargo, goes to a shipping master and states his wants, giving the number of men of the various grades required, and paying a fee of from $3 to $5 per man. The shipping master, armed with this list, goes to the various boarding-houses in search of seamen. He does not apply directly to the men, but to the keepers of the houses. The latter furnish him a list of those of their boarders who are out of money and in debt, and these only are allowed to ship. Those who have any money have no chance to ship unless the demand for seamen is very heavy. Those who have no money are sent to the shipping masters, who engage them with apparent reluctance on the payment of a fee of from $5 to $10. Thus the shipping master draws pay from both ship and crew, and often receives for shipping a crew of twenty men as much as $250 or $300. The tax on the sailor is paid by deduction from the advance wages; and thus this advance, exacted by custom in order to secure a good outfit for the seaman, is absorbed by the landsharks, and the sailor goes on board his ship in rags. He begins his new voyage as he came from his last cruise, almost naked and entirely penniless. Thousands of seamen serve that richest of all paymasters, the sea, from year to year, performing the hardest of labor and submitting to the severest and often the most brutal discipline, varied only by the lowest dissipation, without literally seeing a single dollar of their own money.

This infamous American system of shipping, against which the sailors are now "striking," is at the root of all the evil to the service and many of the outrages on the sailor. It forces upon the service men of no moral character and often incompetent seamen—even men who are not sailors. When the demand is great, any person—stevedore, vagrant, criminal, any one whom the landlords control by force or through intoxication—is shipped without fear or remorse. It does not matter if the sailor is a cripple or diseased; his moral character is never considered by shipper or captain, and it is thus in the power of the shipping master or landlords, by concerted action, to place any ship in the hands of mutinous scoundrels and conspirators. In brief, the shipping masters are without moral or legal restraint, and are influenced solely and wholly by their own interests.

It is from this life that the sailor seeks redemption. There has never been a more vigorous effort made in his interest than the present one, and we heartily hope to see it succeed. If the sailors can succeed in saving their blood-money, they will have gained by their strike an ample advance in their wages. The shipowners who aid them in their strike will not only be enabled to get sailors at cheaper rates, but also improve the character of their crews.

Dreadful as is the social and industrial condition of the sailors in this port, that of the bakers and shoemakers is represented to us as even worse. An account of their condition will soon be given.

CHINA NEWS.

Extracts from the Pekin Gazette.

If we wish to become well acquainted with any people, we must study their newspapers. What a transcript of French life we have in Vie Parisienne and Figaro! The Chinese have no such popular periodicals to offer us. Possessing the art of printing from an early age, they are far in the rear of other nations as regards the liberty of the Press. Newspapers among them can scarcely be said to exist—the only representative of the class, with the exception of a few sheets published by foreigners at the open ports, being an official gazette issued at Pekin.

Somewhat resembling our Congressional Globe, it professes to be a record of the proceedings of the Government and a depository of State papers rather than a magazine of general intelligence. But it possesses a value quite distinct from the news it may happen to contain; for there is not a page of it that does not throw light on some feature of the Government or characteristic of the people. We have received a file and give our readers a few specimens. The following items are taken from the Gazette of Nov. 12 and 13:

REFORM IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Censor YUEN, on his knees, presents a memorial, stating that the distinctions of literary grades are disregarded and the public service day by day becoming more corrupt.

Since the outbreak of the rebellion (some twenty years ago) it has become customary to confer official rank as a reward for pecuniary contributions. And to such a length has this usage proceeded, that one who, by a contribution of money, without any examination, obtained the degree of Bachelor, may, by a further contribution, obtain the post of Sub-Prefect or Mayor. Thus shopkeepers and hucksters become mixed up with the educated Mandarins.

Now these Sub-Prefects and Mayors are the very officers who come most directly into contact with the people; whose conduct, consequently, on whom the peace and prosperity of the Empire depend more than on any others. At a time like the present, when the wounds of the State are not yet healed, and when men of thorough training are hardly equal to the duties of such a post, what are we to expect from these shopkeepers and hucksters? The writing of dispatches and legal decisions must of necessity devolve on their clerks, and the interests of the public be sacrificed to private ends.

I recommend, therefore, that your Majesty command the Provincial Viceroys to subject this class of officials to a public examination, requiring each to compose one literary essay and one legal decision, as a test of ability. If they expose their ignorance, let them be dismissed from office, retaining merely the empty decorations of their purchased rank.

The plan is adopted, and the paper given to the public by imperial order, as expressing the views of the Government.

To us it is further interesting as bringing to view three circumstances in connection with the Chinese Government, viz.: the influence of the censorate in correcting abuses; the literary culture required by law as a preparation for the civil service; and lastly, the corruption of that admirable system in consequence of the recent financial distresses of the Government.

THE SOUP KITCHENS OF THE CAPITAL.

The Prefect of Pekin and others report to the Throne on the administration of one of the Imperial charities, viz., a soup kitchen, called the Hall of Bounty, to which the Emperor had made a donation of 600 sacks of millet. There are many such establishments in Pekin and other large cities, which are sustained partly by the Government and partly by private charity. They are kept open only during the Winter months, and are the means of preserving many lives.

HONOR TO THOSE WHO DIE FOR THEIR COUNTRY.

A censor requests the Emperor to confer some posthumous distinction on a Lieutenant-Colonel, who fell fighting the Mohammedan rebels. His wife, hearing that the city was taken, compelled her two daughters and a concubine of her husband to swallow poison, and afterward poisoned herself.

The memorial prays that the names of these unfortunate females may also be included in the roll of honor. Such cases of suicide are of frequent occurrence. Where war is still waged with all the barbarities of the rudest ages, suicide is woman's only refuge from dishonor.

SACRIFICE TO THE MANES OF A PRINCE.

ECHING, a cousin of the Emperor, reports that he has fulfilled the [illegible] commands, and made a journey [illegible] days to sacrifice at the tomb of the Mongol Prince, BANKOLEBEN. According to rule he offered one young ox, eight sheep and nine jars of arrack, after a careful inquiry, purchasing these articles at the market price.

This Prince fell in battle with the rebels in the Spring of 1865. On one occasion, after a signal victory, he offered up a number of his rebel prisoners as sacrifices to the spirits of his fallen officers.

ILLINOIS.

The Woman Suffrage Movement—The State Penitentiary—Internal Improvements—Railroad Riparian Rights.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Friday, Feb. 26, 1869.

The excitement of the Woman's Convention has nearly died out, although it still remains a matter of pretty general discussion, which shows that an increased interest has been awakened in the subject. A large mass meeting was held at the capital last week, for the edification of the State law makers there assembled. But we judge the efforts of the advocates of woman suffrage will be thrown away on our Solons. All the "rights" they seem to comprehend, is the right to plunder through special and class legislation.

STATE PENITENTIARY.

A strong effort is being made to put the State Penitentiary into the hands of the old "ring" by whom it was formerly so shamefully and inhumanly managed, and by whom the State was mercilessly plundered for nearly a quarter of a century. The project was only defeated by one vote. Since that institution passed into the control of the present Commissioners, its management has been admirable both in a humanitarian and financial point of view. Formerly it was run on the lowest grade of moral principle—governed by brute force of a most shockingly barbarous character, and controlled in its details by a class of drunken men, and solely for the profit of the lessees. The Commissioners have changed the plan of government altogether, and while they make it more than pay its way, the internal discipline is admirable, and it is changed into a reformatory institution, instead of the inmates being constantly and systematically degraded and turned out ten times more the children of the devil than when they entered. The people of the State will not permit a return to the old system.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The project of improving the internal navigation of the State by slack-water navigation on the Kankakee, Rock and Illinois Rivers, and by the construction of a canal to connect with the Mississippi at Rock Island, will get the "go by" by our present Legislature. It has so many petty and private schemes to attend to, that the members have no time to consider matters of grave public importance. So the people will have to wait and hold Conventions and petition a few years longer before their interests can receive attention.

THE LAKE FRONT.

Our citizens are greatly excited over the action of the Legislature in passing the bill granting to the Illinois Central Railroad the right to the "submerged land under Lake Michigan" in front of the city south of the river. The bill passed the House by a vote of 53 to 32, and will undoubtedly pass the Senate, as the Central has always got through every measure it really set out to carry. Great public meetings have been held here, and the measure denounced in no measured terms. But I think it is too late to make a fuss about it. The bill only seeks to confirm the title of the Railroad Company to said lands. This, even, in my judgment, was unnecessary. A case involving exactly the same principles was decided by the United States Supreme Court a few years ago. In consequence of the extension of the north pier into the lake, there were large accretions north of it, amounting to seventy-five or one hundred acres. This, although composed of sand, was available property-land, in the legal sense of the term. Parties owning the lots fronting the lake, of course, claimed these new possessions. Other parties also laid claim to the same. Litigation ensued, and the matter eventually reached the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision was that the owners of the lots fronting the lakes also owned the riparian rights and the accretions. Now, the Central Railroad Company has a deed of a strip of land two hundred feet in width all along the east front of the city, south of the harbor, and fronting on Lake Michigan. Consequently, it is the owner of the riparian rights under the decision of the Supreme Court, and the city can't help itself. The Company has already acted upon the right of ownership, and, without any dispute, has "made" forty or fifty acres of land amid the waters of the lake, east and in the vicinity of the depot, and no one has contested their legal rights in the premises. Although this is a new light to our City Fathers, who contemplated a vast municipal speculation in an outer harbor. I think they will be compelled to yield to the "great corporation." But the city will, after all, have a property west of the track of the railroad worth $3,000,000 at least, as the railroad proposes to take three blocks at the north end of the "lake park" for $600,000. I notice that a committee has been raised in the House to see if the railroad has "bought up" any member to vote for the bill, about which one of the members from this county, who voted in the affirmative, got quite excited.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

In looking over several reports of religious bodies of this State, I find there is quite a difference in the strength of the denominations. The Methodists have about 85,000 members of their churches, and there are something like 1,100 ministers. The Baptists come next with a membership of 54,483, 810 churches and 908 ministers. The "Anti-Mission" Baptists have 125 churches 63 ministers, and the "Free Will" Baptists 56 churches and 44 ministers. The Presbyterians and Congregationalists follow with a combined membership of about 40,000.

But a feature to which I would call attention, is the contrast between the two leading denominations and those which call themselves "Liberal Christians," the Universalists and Unitarians. There are thirty-four ministers of the former and eighteen of the latter in the State. The positiveness and individuality of the Western mind wants something in religion to correspond to its own characteristics. I think there are but three New-Jerusalem or Swedenborgian churches in the State. Ceremony and formalism do not fare much better, and the Episcopal Church has a membership of less than 10,000. There are any number of "isms" in the State, such as "Campbellism," "united Brethrenism," "Winchennarianism," but they are few and feeble.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

We have had a pretty good show of Winter during the past week. On Saturday night and yesterday snow fell to the depth of several inches. But we have little or no ice yet. The river is open, and there is an occasional arrival and departure of vessels. Farmers in the country have commenced plowing where the situation is favorable.

We are to have a new woman's suffrage paper, edited by Mrs. M. A. LIVERMORE. This, it is presumed, will absorb the two contending Sorosis-es now published by the two factions of the new party.

The temperance people are moving in the proposed organization on the "Bloomington platform." Several counties have already been organized, and about forty papers advocate the new movement. They are to commence operations in this city next week. In the meantime the Germans and others interested in the liquor business are organizing opposing "Agitation Committees," and sending out agents for the collection of funds.

Our amusement institutions are in full blast, and doing a lively business. The new Dearborn Theatre promises to be a success. Chicago is great on amusements. The people revel in excitement, and when in Winter they cannot get other business they rush to the theatres and kindred institutions.

The Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association pleads the cause of the apprentice, saying that every master mechanic should furnish the opportunity for one or more to learn his trade thoroughly.

AFFAIRS IN PERU.

Changes in the Cabinet—Imposed Census—Exposition—The Course of the Administration—Financial Talking Republics.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LIMA, Peru, S. A., Friday, Jan. 22, 1869.

Considerable political gossip has agitated the minds of the people this present week and Peru and its legislators seem to be in a worse broil than ever. I have already announced in a previous letter that there was great dissatisfaction over the resignation of Mr. GARCIA CALDERON, the Minister of Finance and Commerce, and the appointment of Dr. BARRENECHEA, Minister of Foreign Affairs, to fill the place temporarily. On the 2d of January the Chamber of Deputies met in nightly session, and passed a vote of censure against Dr. BARRENECHEA.

All this censure was launched upon the worthy Doctor, because of the debate upon the consolidation of the home debt. The session of that day had listened to some very hard expressions from the Minister of Finance, and the Chamber of Deputies therefore passed a vote of censure, intimating plainly that Dr. BARRENECHEA had "not only been found wanting in the consideration due to Congress, but had violated the most trivial rules of urbanity and courtesy." Dr. BARRENECHEA, although fully competent to fill the position of Minister, will no longer continue in the Cabinet, after this public censure from the Chamber of Deputies. President BALTA has therefore named as the new Minister, Mr. NICHOLAS PIEROLA, and the appointment thus made has created great surprise and talk in public, as Mr. PIEROLA is an obscure and almost unknown young man, living entirely retired from all public life. But he possesses an unblemished reputation, considerable talent and enlightened patriotism, and if he is not soon spoiled by being thus brought before the public in so important a position, he will, probably, do better than many other candidates who are anxious to fill the position.

One of the first acts of Mr. PIEROLA was to present himself to the Chamber of Deputies, and tell them of the "preëminent necessity Peru has to raise its credit." Peru is in a state of bankruptcy. Yet, Peru has immense treasures if no credit, and the new Minister thinks it easy enough to create credit, if Congress and Government will only agree upon the means.

President BALTA has appointed Commissioners, Capt. DUENAS, Mr. CENTENO, and Engineer JOSE RIDDLE to inspect and report upon the opening of the new islands and ports of guano deposit, to the north and south of Lima. The islands to the north of Lima reported as containing guano, are called Corvejos, Vinda Tortuga, Corso, Blanco, Corcebada, De La Vinda, De Chao, and Punta. Two small bays, called Los Chinos and Samance, Mar Brava, Chimbote, and two small plains called Nepeña and Santa, where the guano is more than a league in length, and of great strength and purity. At the south of Lima the islands are still more numerous containing guano deposit. These islands are called Asia, Blanca, Ballestas, San Gayan, Zarate Morros de Carretas, Island and Morro do Viejas, San Nicolas, Lomas, Lobos, Atico, Pescadores, Ocona, Coruejos, Capill a Camarones, Mejillones, Coloque, Pajaros, and many ravines, extending into the interior of the country, contain guano in smaller and larger quantities, mixed with chlorides of soda and potash, carbonates and nitrates. The ravines of Lobo, Culata, Sacramento, Animas, Morillo, Guajes, Colorado, Chucumata and Pica, also contain pure guano deposits, covered by a thick coating of white sand. On the southern limit of the coast of Peru and Bolivia there are found immense beds of guano, and on eleven other smaller islands, bordering on Peru, so that centuries on centuries will not find the guano beds exhausted in Peru, if indeed, as some actually affirm, the whole sub-strata is not itself one vast guano bed.

EXPLORATIONS OF THE AMAZON.

An interesting letter has been received by Congress from Mr. JUAN TUCKER, President of the Hydrographic Commission, sent out during President PRADO'S administration to explore all the tributary rivers leading into the Amazon. This letter is dated Nov. 16, and is highly interesting. They ascended the river Veayall through regions entirely unknown, and they prove, beyond a doubt, that the River Veayall is the true source of the Amazon, and that the Veayall can be navigated in any season by large vessels, thus opening up the immense wealth of that hitherto unexplored country. The steamer Napo, which was the only one they had with them, being of small force had not sufficiently powerful machinery to overcome the heavy current, five miles only being the greatest distance it could proceed up the River Yambo. The letter also states that it is impossible to estimate the number of Indians that inhabit these unexplored regions, but that they are inoffensive and undemonstrative, and that the traffic carried on by them is very great. The principal articles of commerce on the lower Veayall are fish, land and river turtle, salt, lard, gums, and oil of copiaba. The temperature is very pleasant, agreeable, and cool, as in Peru. In conclusion, Mr. TUCKER asks Government for a steamer of larger build and draft, to explore still further the riches opening up in this unknown country. The Government will, no doubt, immediately authorize such a steamer to be procured, and Prof. TUCKER promises the navigation of these rivers to the very foot of the Eastern cities. The advantages that Government will derive, as soon as this important discovery is completed, are incalculable. I wonder Yankee enterprise has not made these discoveries long ago.

MORE EARTHQUAKES.

Since my last letter of the 14th, in which I mentioned some quite heavy earthquake shocks in Callao, there has been news received of heavy shocks at Arica, on the 16th and 17th, and slight ones almost daily, followed by a succession of earthquake waves. On the 9th inst., also, the heavy lateral motion was almost as severe as on the 13th of August, and during the entire night the sea rose and fell rapidly about three feet in succession.

SMALL POX AND YELLOW FEVER.

Small pox is raging fearfully in Arequipa, and is extending to Lima. A few cases are reported in Callao also. The yellow fever at Pisagua is spreading with frightful rapidity. Out of twelve hundred inhabitants, says the Mercurio of Tarapoca, only two hundred remain. All are fleeing to the interior who can get away, and 248 persons have already died up to the 28th of the month. Commerce is entirely and totally paralyzed. There are no laborers left to load the vessels lying in port, and no drivers left to drive the mules to the mines to bring down the nitrate. The yellow fever has broken out at Islay also, but at Lima there is not much cause for fear. The bathing places, however, are generally crowded, and the city is pretty quiet and deserted, by the fair sex and children in particular.

HONORED IN DEATH.

The great event of Callao has been the arrival and departure of the Chilian Squadron, consisting of three war corvettes under Admiral BLANCO CUCALADA, the relic of the war of independence, and accompanied by a brilliant staff of military and civil officers. They came to Lima for the purpose of conveying back to Chili the remains of Captain-General O'HIGGINS, who was formerly President of Chili, and one of the most distinguished personages of the war of Chilinian independence. He, like many another brave and loyal patriot, was exiled, died, and was buried in Lima. His remains being exhumed with great pomp and parade, were taken in an elegant funeral-car to the Church of San Domingo, and after the most elaborate ceremonies and display, the remains were conveyed on board the Peruvian frigate Independencia, and taken for interment to Valparaiso.

ATROCITIES OF A CARGO OF COOLIES.

Great excitement was created in Lima, Jan. 16, by the arrival of Señor CODINA, owner of the bark Capalti, which left Callao Jan. 16, 1868, with a crew and a cargo of coolies, bound to some extensive sugar plantations down the coast. Mr. CODINA arrived on the steamer from Panama, and brings the most fearful accounts of the loss of his bark, the mutiny of the coolies on board, murder of the Captain, first and second mate and entire crew, and his own horrible sufferings. The crew were tied by a hawser to a 400-pound anchor and thrown overboard; the man at the wheel and second mate having been murdered by both sides being attempted on each left to die. Mr. CODINA confirms in every respect the terrible accounts already published regarding the fate of his vessel and her crew.

There is now in Callao Bay a Peruvian ship, with the wife of the Captain and her infant child on board, who has just safely landed a cargo of coolies here for the sugar plantations of the coast, and whose coolies in coming out here mutinied, and came en masse to the cabin, with the intention of butchering himself, wife and child, as they had previously done the second mate. The Captain, hearing them coming, got ready all his pistols, guns, &c., and his wife stood by ready to load them. He shot down the first nine coolies as they came forward, and his first mate served four or five in a similar manner. This awed and checked them, and they retired to the forecastle, as he ordered them. Had he hesitated a moment in thus summarily disposing of them, probably a fate as sad as that which overtook the bark Capalti would have befallen them all.

PLANCHETTE TALKS SPANISH.

The Limenian ladies are considerably excited over "Planchette," which writes for them in excellent Spanish, and bewilders them exceedingly. They do say that, in some of the "first circles," it has told some scandalous things, and made some most astounding revelations. The good padres of some of the churches and convents here have pronounced it a veritable Beelzebub, and forbidden its use. The last new sensation, however, is Planchette and its mysteries. Even the foreigners have caught the infection.

THE LATEST EARTHQUAKE.

Since I began my letter a slight jar of an earthquake set doors and windows shaking, and the earth rolled and trembled for a second only. There is something frightful in living, as one does here, as if constantly over a volcano, which may at any moment open and swallow you up. No other fright can equal that of feeling the very ground under your feet sway and roll and rock. When you come to cracks and rents and fissures yawning all about you, the sensation is not the most pleasant.

TENNESSEE.

Inaugural Address of the New Governor.

Mr. DE WITT C. SENTER, Speaker of the State Senate of Tennessee, was on the 25th ult. inaugurated as Governor, to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Mr. BROWNLOW to the United States Senate. Mr. SENTER'S inaugural address was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

The resignation of Gov. BROWNLOW of the powers and duties of the office of Governor of Tennessee imposes upon me, as Speaker of the Senate, in pursuance of the twelfth section of the third article of the Constitution, the duties and responsibilities of that office. The labor incident to the restoration of law and order in our State, forced from its ancient moorings by the sweeping current of rebellion, has devolved on the administration of my predecessor, whose services as Governor have been distinguished not less by devotion to the principles on which is based our National Union than a firm and unwavering purpose to establish, amid conflicting elements, the civil and peaceful relations of the people of the State. I am deeply impressed by the magnitude of the responsibilities I am about to assume. Most ardently could I wish that some one more able should have been chosen to administer the Executive Department of our State for the remainder of the term to which my predecessor was elected. Not, however, that I am wanting in appreciation of the high honor of presiding over so gallant and noble a State as Tennessee. She is the land of my birth, the home of my childhood. In her soil are deposited the ashes of my ancestors and kindred. Her interests are my interests, and, while I would make no invidious distinction or sectional comparison, I will say that I love Tennessee—not more for her fertile valleys, her majestic rivers, her lofty mountains, her inexhaustible treasures of mineral wealth, than for the excellence of her brave and industrious people. To be Governor of such a State, and to add anything to the prosperity of such a people, ought to gratify the ambition of any one. Feeling the full influence of this emotion, I trust, then, gentlemen, that you will pardon me for expressing distrust of my ability to discharge the responsible duties of the high office to which I am called. In coöperation with the other State officials, it will be my earnest desire and effort to faithfully serve the real interests of Tennessee and her citizens by reducing, in all practical ways, the liabilities of the State and economizing its expenditures, thus maintaining unimpaired our financial soundness and credit by preserving in the most efficient operation the present common school system; by giving full play to our extensive internal improvement system; by promoting and preserving peace, order, enforcement of the laws, security of life and property in all parts of the State alike—in a word, to labor to the utmost practical degree to bring Tennessee to that measure of prosperity and glory to which her geographical position and her inexhaustible resources eminently entitle her. In my efforts to do all this, it is not too much to ask or to expect the cheerful coöperation of all good citizens of all classes, sects and parties. In a few days your legislative labors will have been brought to a close, and you will return to your respective homes. Your labors have been arduous and protracted. This was necessary, to adapt the laws to the wants and interests of Tennessee as a free State. In returning to your homes and families you take with you my best wishes for your health and prosperity, individually, and the happiness and prosperity of all whom you represent.

Martial Law in Tennessee—Order to the Militia.

HEADQUARTERS TENNESSEE STATE GUARD,
NASHVILLE, Feb. 23, 1869.

GENERL ORDER NN. 4.—In obedience to the proclamation of His Excellency the Governor, dated Feb. 20, 1869, Lieut.-Col. D. B. GAMBLE, commanding First Regiment Tennessee State Guards, is hereby ordered to move the five companies composing the right wing of his regiment to the town of Pulaski, in Giles County, where he will establish his headquarters. His district will comprise the counties of Maury, Giles, Marshall and Lawrence. He will suspend the civil law in the limits of said district; any person or persons disturbing the public peace will be tried by a military Court and summarily dealt with. Col. GAMBLE will hold his command under strict discipline, and will severely punish any officer or enlisted man who may be detected in any violation of the rules and articles of war. All supplies of quartermaster stores and commissary stores will be furnished when practicable by the Quartermaster-General of the State. Should it be necessary, in any instance, to send out a foraging party, it must be accompanied by the Regimental Quartermaster, who will receive written instructions from the officer commanding the battalion. Any officer or enlisted man found or detected in pillaging, marauding, or in any manner whatsoever disturbing peaceful citizens pursuing the ordinary avocations of life, will Further Speculations in Regard to Gen. Grant's Advisers.

The President-Elect Besieged by a Southern Delegation.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow Supposed to be the Coming Pennsylvanian.

Massachusetts to be Represented by Ex-Gov. Clifford.

Some Indications of Gen. Grant's Foreign Policy.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Feb. 27, 1869.

It is not improbable that the fortunate man from Pennsylvania whose selection as a member of the Cabinet of Gen. GRANT is to surprise himself as well as the party leaders from his State, may yet prove to be Hon. GALUSHA A. GROW. Gen. CAMERON and Gov. CURTIN have each been claiming, through their agents and friends, to be the influential leaders of the most powerful faction of the Republican Party in Pennsylvania, and insisting, in view of what they did in the late canvass to carry the State for Gen. GRANT, on the right to dictate the distribution of the patronage in that State; but it is positively known here that immediately after the election both Gen. GRANT and Mr. E. B. WASHBURNE expressed the opinion that to the personal exertions of Mr. GROW more than to those of any other man in the State, was it due that Pennsylvania was carried for the Republican Party. It will be remembered that Mr. GROW, though not particularly prominent in the canvass, represented Pennsylvania on the Republican National Committee, which held its meetings in the Fifth-avenue Hotel, New-York, and which silently but vigorously accomplished a great deal of most effective work. At the time alluded to Gen. GRANT and his more immediate political and personal friends named above, undoubtedly gave Mr. GROW the chief credit for the triumph of the party in the doubtful State of Pennsylvania, and there is no reason to think that their opinion has been changed on this point. Gen. GRANT is much more ready and disposed to see and recognize such earnest, quiet and practical efforts as those of the several members of that Committee, than the more noisy but less effective efforts of such leaders as Gov. CURTIN and Mr. CAMERON and—not to be invidious—Mr. MCCLURE. His attention was more particularly directed to Mr. GROW than to any other member of the Committee, on account of the importance of the contest in his State; and those familiar with GRANT's former expression believe he intends to give it a second edition in an improved form by inviting Mr. GROW to the Interior or Postal Department.

It is not to be inferred from what I have said that this appointment is to be Mr. GROW's reward for political services. I do not believe Gen. GRANT would select Mr. GROW, or any other man, for a Cabinet position solely as a reward for the most earnest political efforts, any more than he would select an officer of the army for a large and important command for other than purely military reasons. This is coming to be generally understood here, and, coupled with the further understanding that Gen. GRANT does not consider that the qualifications of a successful State politician are the only requisites of a national statesman, gives great trouble to those who have come backed only by State political influence. They begin to understand, too, that he does not believe that the unity and strength of a national party is best sustained by absorbing all the weak with the few strong elements of the various State organizations; but, on the contrary, that the latter prosper when the national party is vigorous, and that that party is strongest which administers the Government with the most purity, and for the greatest good of the whole people. The old politicians say that he cannot preserve the party by any such policy, and I have heard more than one of the disappointed ones say that defeat in the State elections and in 1872 is inevitable if GRANT "don't take care of the party." They are already looking forward that distance. Gen. GRANT, during his whole career as a soldier, let promotion take care of itself. He asked none of the advancements which he received. He felt, and acted on the conviction, that the surest road to promotion was in the faithful discharge of present duty. President GRANT, during his whole career as statesman, will just as certainly let party take care of itself, satisfied that the surest way for a party to retain the rule of a nation is to rule it well. He will not seek to organize the party that it may rule, but rather to strengthen the country, that in the future it may desire to be ruled by his party. It is this conviction dawning on their minds which so terribly paralyzes the professional politicians here.

One reason cited by Gen. GRANT for refusing to disclose the name of his Cabinet before his inauguration is not a little curious; and though the fact stated has been suspected, I do not believe it has ever been published. He said, a few days ago, in explanation of his reasons for keeping his Cabinet a secret, that few of the Presidents who had done otherwise had been successful in forming their Cabinets as they desired, and cited among others Mr. LINCOLN, declaring that, of the original Cabinet list prepared by him in 1861, only two were permitted to take their portfolios. All the rest were dictated to him by party leaders and interests. He did not explain how he had come into possession of this fact, but simply stated it as a fact by which he had taken warning.

GEN. GRANT'S FOREIGN POLICY.

Gen. GRANT has on more than one occasion lately made some important declarations in regard to the future policy of the Government in regard to the Alabama claims. His opinion on this subject has been before stated in general terms, and it has been known for some time that he does not approve of the Johnson treaty now before the Senate. His objections to it are based on the ground that the treaty negotiated by Mr. JOHNSON reduces the questions at issue between England and the United States to a mere matter of dollars and cents, and ignores entirely the grave international and moral questions involved. These ignored aspects of the case, involving as they do the honor of the United States, the future peace of the two countries, and the prosperity of the material interests so seriously affected by the English violations of international law, are, in Gen. GRANT's opinion, more important than the financial considerations.

This opinion, as I said before, has been freely expressed by the General and widely published, but in conversation lately with a fellow officer of the army he alluded to the subject in such a way as to leave the impression that at an early day, after his inauguration, he will press the matter to a conclusion, and while not forgetting the financial claim, he will as strenuously insist on the proper settlement of the legal questions involved, not forgetting the honor of the nation. In other words England will have to apologize as well as pay. This part of the conversation was originated by a reference to a telegram published that morning to the effect that the London Times had expressed the opinion that if the Johnson-Clarendon treaty was rejected by the United States, England would make no further advances toward a settlement. During the same conversation, but on the subject of reconstruction, expression was given to the idea that "reconstruction being practically settled, society in the South would soon resume its old status of good feeling and fellowship, and old issues would be forgotten in the more absorbing ones of the Alabama claims, Cuban annexation, &c." There is little doubt that a new policy in regard to these claims will prevail under the next Administration, and that it will be acted upon at once. It may not be as discreet and wise as that now being pursued, but it will certainly be more in accord with public feeling in the matter.

Among other prompt and positive actions of the new President, on his induction into office, will be the recall of Gen. ROSECRANS from Mexico.

THE LOUISIANA ELECTION CASES.

There was an apparent disposition on the part of the House to-day to swear in J. WILLIS MENARD, the mulatto member from Louisiana, during the discussion of the contesting claims; but the speech of Mr. SHELLABARGER, of Ohio, dissipated all idea of it, if, indeed, there was any, for some believe that numbers of the more radical members advocated his admission for the sake of consistency, without desiring to see it. It was observed that Mr. SHELLABARGER's speech was made very shortly after Gen. GRANT came on the floor of the House, and this gave rise to a rumor that he had inspired it. Mr. SHELLABARGER was listened to very attentively, and from the moment that he explained that the temporary admission of Mr. MENARD would leave the door open to the Louisiana delegation to the Forty-first Congress elected in November, MENARD's chances grew very slim. It is known that the President elect—the best-informed man in Washington on the subject of reconstruction—looks upon the Louisiana election of Nov. 3 as invalid—a monstrous fraud. This knowledge, added to the fact of his opportune appearance in the House, confirmed people in the idea that he had inspired Mr. SHELLABARGER's speech; but it is probably not the case, as Mr. SHELLABARGER has long been fully alive to the character of the Louisiana election, and strongly opposed to the admission of the delegation from that State to the Forty-first Congress. I imagine that there is no chance for them to get in. The Georgia delegation may yet be unseated also, though Gen. GRANT is said to look upon their election as legal, and to have urged Mr. BOUTWELL, who has their case in hand, not to press their expulsion. Gen. GRANT is not in favor of undoing any part of the work of reconstruction, and it is for this reason that he contemplates, as you have been advised, the prompt return of REYNOLDS to Texas and SICKLES to South Carolina. WASHINGTON, Monday, March 1.

VISITORS TO ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

The number of visitors at Gen. GRANT's headquarters, this morning, was larger than ever before, a continual stream passing in and out from 10 until 12 o'clock. Lieut.-Gen. SHERMAN arrived at the office about 10 o'clock, and was with Gen. GRANT all of the forenoon.

A Southern delegation of Representatives in Congress, consisting of Messrs. B. F. WHITTEMORE, of South Carolina; MCKEE, of Kentucky; KELLOW, of Alabama; KITCHEN, of West Virginia; BLACKBURN, of Louisiana; BOYDEN, of North Carolina; HAMILTON, of Florida; BOLES, of Arkansas, and ARNELL, of Tennessee, had an interview with the General shortly after 10. The Chairman of the delegation, Mr. WHITTEMORE, stated that they had called to make known to the General the confidence of the loyal people of the South in his Administration, and to acquaint him with the condition of affairs and wants of the people in those States, and their indulgence of the hope that their section would be remembered by him in the selection of his Cabinet. Gen. GRANT, in his reply, stated that he was glad to receive them, and assured them that under his Administration he would endeavor to have affairs satisfactorily conducted in the South, but gave no intimation as to what his intention was in reference to a member of the Cabinet from that section. He stated that military matters in the South would be changed, and commanders assigned to duty there who were in sympathy with the Administration. The members of the delegation then spoke of Messrs. CRESWELL of Maryland, and MAYNARD of Tennessee, as suitable persons for Cabinet positions, but distinctly stated to the General that it was not their intention to dictate to him in regard to selections for his Cabinet, but merely to suggest the names of persons who would be acceptable as Southern Republicans.

Next came a Missouri delegation, headed by Gen. R. T. VAN HORN, Col. GEO. W. ANDERSON, Gen. PILE and Mr. STOVER, Representatives in Congress, with a number of prominent Missourians, who called to pay their respects to Gen. GRANT, and were cordially received. Among the other visitors were Senators elect HAMLIN of Maine, and BOREMAN of West Virginia, and JOSHUA HILL of Georgia, Senators STEWART and NYE, and GEORGE C. GORHAM, Esq., Gens. SICKLES, HARNEY and J. J. REYNOLDS, Senator WARNER, with a delegation of Alabamians, Senator CATTELL, J. A. KENNEDY, Esq., Superintendent of Police, New-York, Hon. J. H. KETCHAM, Bishop SIMPSON, Judge MCKINSTRY, and a number of Ministers who are in the city to attend the Conference which meets here on Wednesday.

CALEB CUSHING to-day expressed the opinion that Judge JOHN H. CLIFFORD, of Massachusetts, would enter the Cabinet as Attorney-General. CUSHING and CLIFFORD are intimate friends, and he probably bases his opinion on the facts that when GRANT went to Boston CLIFFORD received him as Chairman of the State Electors, escorted him to Harvard as President of the Board of Overseers of the College, and finally bowed him out as President of the Boston and Providence Railroad. Added to these is the fact that CLIFFORD was Governor of Massachusetts and a fellow member of the Peabody Fund Trustees.

A prominent gentleman who spent an hour with Gen. GRANT to-day, says that he learned nothing in regard to the Cabinet, except negatively, and he hazards a guess that there will be nobody in the Cabinet from Ohio, nor from the Pacific Coast, nor from the South.

INAUGURATION VISITORS.

Inauguration week has opened with a presage of great crowds to follow. The arrivals since Saturday have been very large, and the search for lodgings is vigorous and well nigh unavailing, the hotels are all crowded to their utmost capacity, and refuse to expand under the pressure. The influx of strangers was nowhere more perceptible than at the Capitol, whither thousands wended their way at an early hour, enjoying the bracing air and general sunshine of the frosty March morning as they climbed the solid stone steps of the western approaches. They strolled through the great Rotunda in mute astonishment at its wonderful architecture; they filled the corridors with a whirl of eager pursuit, and a rustle of rich costumes. They crowded the galleries at either end in search of legislative dignity and prominent men, and leveled their glasses mistakenly at the small men for the great ones. To-night the pressure is increased, and rooms have gone up to fabulous prices, sleeping apartments of indifferent character within two squares of Willard's commanding from four to eight dollars per day. The number of people here promises to be equal to that of 1861, and far in excess of 1865. Carpenters and laborers were busy to-day in the erection of a platform extending over the steps leading to the main entrance of the Capitol on the east side, for the purpose of accommodating Judges of the Supreme Court, Senators, Representatives and others on the day of inauguration; it will be much larger than the one constructed when Mr. LINCOLN was first inaugurated, and in all probability there will be barely room enough for those who are legally entitled to be present.

THE PUBLIC CREDIT BILL.

The Public Credit bill came to the House this morning and went to the Speaker's table. Gen. SCHENCK intimated his intention of moving to-morrow a non-concurrence in the Senate's amendments, for the purpose of asking a Committee of Conference. There is a very general confidence in its ultimate passage, caused in a great measure by the beneficial effect which the measure has already exercised upon the public credit. Its passage will be promptly supplemented on Thursday by Gen. GRANT's inaugural address, which will reinforce the purpose of the bill in terms not to be misunderstood. On no subject will Gen. GRANT speak plainer than on the duty of maintaining the plighted faith of the Government under all circumstances. This assurance he gives without reservation.

GEN. SHERMAN'S HEADQUARTER STAFF.

Lieut.-Gen. SHERMAN will succeed to the command of the army without any of the staff concomitants, save his personal aids, Col. DAYTON, Major AUDENRIED and Capt. MCCOY. The Lieutenant-General says he will endeavor to administer army affairs on the principle of retrenchment and economy, indicated by the action of Congress. He has been formally notified by the Committee in charge of the purchase of Gen. GRANT's house for presentation to him.

THE COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS.

The Committee on Naval Affairs of the Senate have finished up all the business before them, and will transact no further business this session.

STATUS OF THE GEORGIA REPRESENTATIVES.

The status of the Georgia Representatives elect to the Forty-first Congress is as follows: The Constitutional Convention passed an ordinance providing for an election of members of Congress for both the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses at the same time. The same candidates were voted for on both tickets. This was done because it was not certain at the time the ordinance was passed that Georgia would be admitted during the term of the Fortieth Congress, but the question has arisen that there was no power either in law or in the Constitution which would warrant the choosing two sets of members at one election. The credentials, I learn, have very recently been received, but I believe the Clerk still adheres to his determination not to put them on the roll for the reasons above stated. All that Gov. BOUTWELL said to Gen. GRANT on Saturday on this subject was to the effect that the Reconstruction Committee had abandoned action for this session.

CRUSH OF BUSINESS IN BOTH HOUSES.

The state of public business in the two Houses is very critical. Besides the Indian Appropriation bill, the probable failure of which is elsewhere alluded to, there are 120 bills on the Speaker's table. Of these the Bank bill, which is back from the Senate with amendments, will undoubtedly fail. A motion for a Conference Committee on this bill has already been defeated.

The Senate have still to act on four of the most important Appropriation bills, and yet they wasted this entire day in discussing questions of order, and a Massachusetts claim over twenty years old. At this rate it is not possible they can get through by noon of Thursday.

The House spent the whole day on the Miscellaneous bill, and finished it at a late hour. This body is much in advance of the Senate, which seems to think there is nothing to do but talk. The Army Appropriation bill was the principal measure before the Senate to-day, but very little progress was made on it. The greater part of the day and night session was consumed on the amendment offered by Mr. SUMNER to pay to the State of Massachusetts the interest on certain war claims, dating back to 1812-15, which amounted to over $700,000. The principal was paid in 1859, and the claim was for interest to that time.

PRESENTATION OF SENATORIAL CREDENTIALS.

The credentials of Hon. Mr. BAYARD, Senator elect from Delaware, were presented to the Senate to-day by his father. The Senatorship of that State appears to be an heirloom of the BAYARDS, the incoming Senator being the fourth member of the family elected to the Senate. The credentials of Mr. BOREMAN and of Gov. BROWNLOW, Senators elect from West Virginia and Tennessee, respectively, were also presented.

THE SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The Senate Finance Committee will, in all probability, hold no more sessions during the present Congress, although they have not yet adjourned sine die. The two most important measures before them are the Hooper bill and the Tax bill. A report on the former bill may possibly be presented before the 4th of March, but no action will be taken on the Tax bill.

REPORT ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Mr. SUMNER reported back a large number of bills, resolutions, memorials, &c., to-day, from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, making a clean sweep of almost everything before that body. The St. Thomas Treaty is almost the only important measure now before the Committee, the consideration of which will, of course, go over to the next session of Congress.

THE NEW-YORK ALDERMANIC DELEGATES.

The delegates of the New-York Board of Aldermen arrived this morning, and are the guests of the Metropolitan Hotel, and not of the city as they evidently expected to be. It was expected that Mayor BOWEN would receive them, but he declined on account of ill health. The New-York Aldermen voted to come here to examine the city institutions and buildings, but, as this city has none worth examining, our civic authorities concluded the New-Yorkers intended a joke at their expense, and are snubbing them at a fearful rate.

NEW-YORK WAR CLAIMS.

The New-York delegates to-day presented vouchers against the Government for nearly a million of dollars of unsettled war claims, and the Secretary of War has promised an answer in a day or two. The Aldermen are going to Mount Vernon to-morrow.

THE PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The House proposes to bring the Pacific Railroads up to the mark. A resolution was introduced to-day by Mr. JUDD, of Illinois, directing the President of the United States to require the Union and Central Pacific Railroads, and their branches, to give bonds for the completion of their several roads, and for bringing them up to the standard of efficiency required by law.

CHARGES AGAINST A UNITED STATES CONSUL.

Some merchants in New-York who are importers of hardware from Sheffield, England, made charges to the Secretary of State and to the Secretary of the Treasury to-day, against GEORGE I. ABBOTT, Esq., our Consul at Sheffield, to the effect that he had, through his Vice-Consul, been in the habit of charging two shillings and sixpence sterling on each invoice for verifying the same, in addition to the fee prescribed by law. The action of the Consul has been thoroughly investigated, and is fully sustained by both Departments. The charges made by him and his Vice-Consul as such are all legal and just, and he is complimented for the courteous manner in which he has performed his duties, and the faithful manner in which he has protected the interests of the Government.

THE NEW-YORK POST OFFICE.

The people of New-York will be glad to learn that a beginning has at last been made on the appropriation for the New-York Post Office. During the consideration of the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill in the House to-night, Mr. BROOKS moved an amendment to insert $200,000 for this object. Mr. STEWART stirred up the Republicans to vote for this Democratic amendment, and it was carried. The same amount was appropriated for Boston.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

It is exceedingly probable that among several important bills that will fail will be the Indian Appropriation bill. The two Houses are wide apart as the poles upon the subject, and there are as yet no signs of their coming together. As the House passed it, the bill contained the sum of $2,300,000. As it comes back from the Senate it appropriates over $6,000,000, the increase being made to carry out certain Indian treaties. As the difference involves the whole question of the Indian policy, on which the two Houses radically disagree, the bill now seems likely to fail altogether.

THE DYER COURT-MARTIAL.

The Dyer Court-martial still goes on from day to day and is likely to continue all through the Summer. Two large volumes of testimony have already been taken, and the accusers have not yet finished their side of the case. Among the witnesses examined within the last few days was Mr. AMES, of Connecticut.

NAVAL NEWS.

The Navy Department is advised of the arrival at Lisbon on the 10th inst. of the United States steamer Richmond, nineteen days from Boston. Her passage out was very stormy. The Commander of the Richmond says that the weather was the heaviest he had ever experienced at sea. On the fourth day out the ship was struck by lightning, which passed through the deck and distributed itself in the engine-room. The storeship Guard is the only American war vessel at Lisbon besides the Richmond.

An Engagement Reported at Cifuentes—The Government Troops Victorious—Spanish Vessels off the Coast.

HAVANA, Monday, March 1.

Gen. PUELLO, with his command, has arrived at Santo Espiritu from Cienfuegos.

The Diario reports an engagement between the troops and insurgents at the town of Cifuentes, in which the Government troops were victorious. The same paper states that three hundred rebels have surrendered at Villa Clara.

It seems that Gen. LESCA is advancing into the interior without meeting with much opposition. The rebels expected that he would march by the Sierra de Cubitas, or take the road to Paredez, where they had erected intrenchments, and were ready to oppose his progress; but LESCA unexpectedly took another route, and outwitted the rebel Gen. QUESADA.

The Diario asserts that the revolutionary General, NAPOLEON ARINGO, has joined Count VALMASEDA with two thousand men, abandoning the rebellion; and that VALMASEDA, reinforced by a thousand of these men, has set out from Puerto Principe to meet Gen. LESCA, when with their combined forces, they will attack QUESADA.

Four Spanish gunboats are cruising between La Guanaja and Gibara.

The Spanish man-of-war Guadiana is watching the movements of the revolutionists in the waters of Nassau.

The United States steamer Gettysburg has arrived here.

NEW-ZEALAND.

Sanguinary Reprisals Made on the Natives by the English Troops.

LONDON, Monday, March 1.

The War Office is in receipt of later intelligence from New-Zealand. The British forces there had made reprisals on the natives for the outrages committed at Poverty Bay, during which several villages were destroyed, and ninety of the natives killed and wounded. The British lost only three wounded.

GERMANY.

Grant to Frankfort-on-the-Main.

BERLIN, Monday, March 1.

The proposition to grant the City of Frankfort-on-the-Main 2,000,000 florins has passed the Prussian Diet by a large majority.

FRANCE.

Death of the Poet Lamartine.

PARIS, Monday, March 1.

ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE, the poet and historian, died to-day in the 79th year of his age.

Great Obstruction to Railroad Traffic by the Snow—An Accident.

OTTAWA, Canada, Monday, March 1.

Four hundred men were at work to-day clearing the snow off the track of the Ottawa and Prescott Railroad from this point. Only four miles of the road had been opened. The track is clear from Prescott to Kemptville. Passengers and mails are conveyed from the latter place to Ottawa in sleighs. No mails have been received from the West since Tuesday last.

It is reported that Hon. Mr. GALT will again take a seat in the Cabinet.

MONTREAL, Monday, March 1.

Railway travel is still obstructed by snow. No trains have left here for the East or West for the past three days. The Arthabaska Railroad is so completely snowed up, that it will be abandoned for the season. In some places the snow lies in drifts nearly thirty feet deep.

The trains to this place from every direction are delayed by the heavy snow. The European mail, due last Friday, will not arrive till to-morrow. Much apprehension exists as to the safety of several of the roofs of large public and private buildings here by reason of the long-continued snow storm.

The Montreal train which left New-York on Friday afternoon was thrown from the track, owing to a defective rail, near Pittsford, Vt., on the Rutland and Burlington Railroad, at 2 A. M. on Saturday. The sleeping-car was hurled down a steep slope some thirty feet, near the banks of the Coter River. The car was wrecked, but no lives were lost, although several passengers were injured. Gen. AVERILL, United States Consul-General to Canada, received some severe cuts and bruises on his head. Lieut. FITZGERALD, of the Rifles, son of the Duke of Cambridge, was also bruised, though not dangerously, and several other passengers were hurt. The passengers on the other cars, under the direction of Gen. AVERILL, who got out through a window, extinguished the fire, which had communicated to some of the cars, with snow, and extricated the passengers within. Gen. AVERILL and the other passengers were delayed on their arrival here till late last night. Numerous prominent citizens called last night and to-day at the Consulate to congratulate the General upon his narrow escape.

Mr. JOHN MCWILLIAMS and Mr. CALDWELL, of New-York, were in the cars when the accident happened, but were uninjured, and were active in affording aid to the other passengers.

TENNESSEE.

Alleged Outrage Upon a Negro Girl by a Militia Soldier—Adjournment of the State Legislature.

NASHVILLE, Monday, March 1.

The Banner has a special dispatch to the effect that last Friday night a militiaman of Col. GAMBLE's command, stationed near Pulaski, went to the cabin of a negro, pretending to have orders for his arrest, and sent him off. He then took a daughter of the negro, aged about 13, into the woods and ravished her. The father returned, found his daughter absent, and, with a party of friends, went out in search of her. The militiaman was arrested and placed in charge of a colored guard, to be taken to headquarters. He attempted to escape, when he was shot, beaten with butts of muskets, and left in a dying condition. Col. GAMBLE, on an investigation, justified the negroes.

The Legislature adjourned to-day. The ratification of the amendment to the Constitution goes over until next session.

MEMPHIS, Monday, March 1.

The election regarding the issue of half a million in thirty-year bonds to pay the indebtedness of the city, resulted in favor of issuing the bonds.

De Soto County is now without civil officers, all former incumbents having failed to take the oath required by Gen. GILLEM'S order.

Capt. FORD, of the tug Nettie Jones, arrested for alleged complicity in the destruction of arms belonging to the State of Arkansas, was released at Little Rock, this morning, on $20,000 bail.

Proceedings in the Louisiana Legislature.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, March 1.

A bill was introduced in the House to-day, passed to a third reading, and engrossed, providing for the issue of five millions thirty-year six per cent. gold bonds, for the payment of which the guarantee of the United States Government is to be obtained. The bonds are to be put on the market and sold, or hypothecated for loans. All the proceeds of such bonds are to be appropriated exclusively for the building and repair of levees and other public works under the control of the Board of Public Works. Payment of the interest and principal is provided for by a special tax, and the proceeds of all swamp lands otherwise undisposed.

A joint resolution ratifying the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States passed both Houses to-day.

Trouble Between Revenue Officers in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, March 1.

D. P. SOUTHWORTH, Supervisor of Internal Revenue for the Eastern District, has suspended Assessor JOHN W. FRAZIER, of the First District of Pennsylvania, for alleged neglect of duty, and directed Assistant Assessor H. V. STAFFORD to take charge of the office. It is understood that Assessor FRAZIER refuses to recognize the authority of the Supervisor, and has sent him a letter to that effect, and that he intends to continue to perform the duties of his office.

Indictment of Supervisors at San Francisco—Snow Blockade of the Pacific Railroad—The Congressional Amendment.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sunday, Feb. 28.

The Grand Jury on Saturday indicted four members of the "Committee on Outside Lands" of the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, for fraud in connection with the disposal of outside lands belonging to the municipality.

The Union Pacific Railroad is still blockaded with snow for many miles. There have been no trains either way, between Wascacht and the western terminus of the Union Pacific Road, since the 12th of February. Our latest overland mail advices from New-York are to the 6th of February.

WM. A. BRADLEY, Assistant Surgeon and Brevet Major in the United States Army, died suddenly yesterday, of apoplexy, at Point San Jose.

The Congressional Amendment to the Constitution, allowing universal suffrage, was received at Carson City by telegraph, and submitted to both Houses of the Legislature yesterday, and made the special order for Monday. The ratification of the Amendment is doubtful, as the opinion prevails that it permits Asiatics to become citizens.

Alaska advices are to the 9th of February. Two white men, while on a trading expedition, were killed by Kolkee Indians, near Sitka, in revenge for the death of their friends, who were shot by the sentries at Sitka. The United States steamer Saginaw, with Gen. DAVIS and staff, was about leaving for Kolkee. The revenue cutter Reliance was still at Sitka. Arrived: Ships Mary E. Packer, from New-York; Bombay, from New-York; Saga, from Manila.

The Philadelphia Commercial Exchange Association Banquet.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, March 1.

A banquet, given by the members of the Commercial Exchange Association, in honor of the dedication of their new hall, which was thrown open to the public to-day, took place in the Continental Hotel. The main table, at which were seated invited guests, ran along the head of the hall, with nine other tables extending the whole length of the hall, which were gaily decorated with flags and crowned with every delicacy. The ornaments were beautiful and most appropriate to the occasion. JOHN H. MICHENER, President of the Association, presided. After the edibles had been disposed of, the President made the opening speech, in which he welcomed the delegates from the Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of other cities present by invitation. The first toast was to the cities of Chicago and Milwaukee, which was responded to by Mr. RANDOLF, of Chicago, who concluded a happy speech by toasting the City of Philadelphia. Ex-Mayor Mr. MCMICHAEL responded to this in his usual happy vein.

The next toast was to the City of Boston, to which Mr. SAMPSON responded.

Cincinnati was next complimented with a toast, and Mayor GESHAM fulfilled the duty of responding.

The Judiciary was next toasted, and responded to by Judge THOMPSON, of the Supreme Court.

The City of New-York was complimented with a toast, happily responded to by Mr. BOGART.

Similar compliments were given to the Cities of St. Louis, Indianapolis and Richmond, which were responded to by delegates from those cities.

The festivities were kept up till past midnight, when the party separated in great good humor.

The Buffalo Skating Match—Swift Victorious.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Monday, March 1.

Messrs. GILL, JENKINS and EDWARDS, the judges selected from New-York City to decide the skating match between SWIFT and GOODRICH, for the championship of America and a diamond medal, having arrived late on Saturday night, the match was skated over this afternoon. The contest lasted two and a half hours. SWIFT won the match, the score being 42 to 39. SWIFT greatly excelled in the first part of the programme in the complicated movements. GOODRICH scored heavily and came near carrying off the prize. SWIFT, by the rules of the Skating Congress, retains the medal. CALLIE CURTIS has challenged the winner, and the match will come off in two weeks if the ice holds good. The New-York City excursionists will attend the grand carnival to-night at the Rink, visit Niagara Falls to-morrow, and arrive home on Wednesday.

Marine Disaster off the Connecticut Coast.

BOSTON, Mass., Monday, March 1.

Arrived brig Clara Jenkins, from Messina. She reports: "On Sunday, picked up the long-boat of the ship Harry Bluff, of New-York, Capt. OLIVER, from Cadiz for Boston, containing the crew of that ship, she having struck on South Shoal, off Nantucket, at midnight on Friday, and soon after filled with water." The crew were landed here this afternoon. The vessel was abandoned at anchor in thirteen fathoms of water, and with sixteen feet of water in her hold, and probably foundered shortly after the crew left her. In leaving the ship two of the crew were drowned, and two others froze to death in the boat. All hands were more or less frostbitten, and most of them have been placed in the hospital. The ship had a cargo of salt and wine.

Arrest of an Alleged Swindler in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Monday, March 1.

An extensive swindling case has been unearthed here. Last June MOSES E. LUDINGTON defrauded several New-York, Boston and Philadelphia firms out of a stock of goods worth $127,000, and then failed. His silent partner has been arrested, by whom the whole plan has been revealed, and a large amount of goods will be recovered.

Hon. J. N. MORRIS, of Quincy, Ill., has written to a friend in that city that he declined a Cabinet appointment because the salary does not cover the expenses of living in Washington.

Extensive Fire at Jackson, Miss.

JACKSON, Miss, Monday, March 1.

A large fire occurred at 3 o'clock this morning, which burned the Clarion newspaper job offices and bookbindery. The loss is $25,000, which is partly covered by insurance. GEORGE C. EYRICH'S book and stationery store was also burned. Loss, $15,000; insured for $9,000. The fire originated in the Clarion office, and was the work of an incendiary. The Clarion will resume publication to-morrow.

Escape of Prisoners from Hampton Jail.

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., Monday, March 1.

Twelve negroes who were confined in Hampton broke from jail and escaped on Saturday night. Two were charged with rape and the others with minor offences.

Daring Burglaries in Boston.

BOSTON, Monday, March 1.

NATHANIEL G. WOOD, watchmaker and jeweler, in Hanover-street, was robbed Sunday morning of $7,000 worth of property.

D. C. STICKNEY, an expressman, had $32,000 stolen from his dwelling yesterday. Suspicion rests on an inmate of the house, who has disappeared.

Hudson River Navigation Again Closed.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Monday, March 1.

The thermometer marked five degrees below zero at 5 o'clock this morning. The river is full of heavy ice. Vessels are no longer able to reach Newburg, owing to a heavy ice gorge at West Point. Foot passengers are crossing safely on the ice as far down as New-Hamburg, eight miles below this city. Below that point there are large fields of floating ice as far down as Tarrytown. If the cold weather holds till to-morrow, the river will probably be frozen over solidly from Peekskill north.

Extensive Fire in Montpelier, Vt.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Monday, March 1.

A fire occurred at Morrisville this morning, resulting in the complete destruction of the Masonic Hall building, containing, besides the hall, a drug store and grocery, Post Office and other offices. A harness shop, together with a dwelling-house adjoining, were also burned. Most of the furniture was saved from the dwelling, but not much from the other buildings. The property was partly insured.

Municipal Elections in Maine.

PORTLAND, Me., Monday, March 1.

The Democrats carried Portland for the first time since 1860, and WILLIAM L. PUTNAM is elected Mayor. The vote stands: PUTNAM, 2,207; DRUMMOND, 2,077. Last year the vote was: PUTNAM, 2,277; MCLELLAN, 2,437; DEERING, the Temperance candidate, 179. The Democrats carried four of the seven wards.

SACO, Me., Monday, March 1.

Owing to dissensions in the Republican Party the city election to-day resulted in no choice for Mayor, JAMES M. DEERING, the present incumbent, lacking 83 votes of a majority. Six Republican Aldermen are elected, and in one ward there was no choice.

LEWISTON, Me., Monday, March 1.

Hon. ISAAC N. PARKER, Republican, was elected Mayor to-day by a vote of 630 to 175. The Republicans carried all but one ward.

Completion of the Missouri Valley Railroad.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Monday, March 1.

The extension of the Missouri Valley Railroad was completed on Saturday night to the Western Division of the North Missouri Road, forming another direct route from St. Louis to St. Joseph, thence to Omaha.

Funeral of a Distinguished Mason.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Monday, March 1.

The R. W. and Rev. CHARLES PLATT, Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of F. and A. M., who died at his residence in this city on Thursday morning last, will be buried with Masonic honors at Lyons, Wayne County, on Thursday afternoon next. An escort of Knights Templar will accompany the remains from this city.

GOLD CONTRACTS.

Decision of Chief Justice Chase in the Case of Thomas C. Butler against Benjamin P. Horwitz.

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 1.

The Supreme Court of the United States to-day decided the RUSSELL, MAJOR & CO.'s Floyd acceptances to be illegal. The Court also delivered an opinion sustaining the gold contract case from Maryland, on the same principle as that involved in the case of BRONSON against RODES. Chief Justice CHASE delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court to-day in cause No. 70—Thomas C. BUTLER vs. BENJAMIN J. HORWITZ—in error to the Court of Common Pleas for the State of Maryland. The following is a careful report of the opinion:

Chief Justice Chase said—The principles which determine the case of Bronson vs. Rodes will govern our judgment in this case. The record shows a suit for breach of the covenant for payment of rent in a lease of certain premises to the City of Baltimore, made in 1791 for 99 years, renewable forever, upon an annual rent of fifteen pounds current money of Maryland, payable in English golden guineas, weighing five pennyweights and six grains, at thirty-five shillings each, and this gold and silver at their present weight and rate established by act of Assembly. The obvious intent of the contract was to secure payment of a certain rent in gold and silver, and thereby to avoid the fluctuations to which the currency of the country, in the days which preceded and followed the establishment of our independence, had been subject; and, also, all future fluctuations incident to arbitrary or uncertain measures of value, whether introduced by law or usage. It was argued in the Court below that the rent due upon the lease reduced to current gold and silver coin was, on the 1st of January, 1866, $40, and judgment was rendered on the 27th of June, 1866, for $69 17. This judgment was rendered as the legal result of two propositions, first, that the covenant in the lease required the delivery of a certain amount of gold and silver in payment of rent; and, second, that damages for non-performance must be assessed in the legal-tender currency. The first of these propositions is, in our judgment, correct; the second is, we think, erroneous. It is not necessary to go at length into the grounds of this conclusion. We will only state briefly the general propositions on which it rests, most of which has been stated more fully in Brownson vs. Rodes. A contract to pay a certain sum in gold and silver coin is in substance and legal effect a contract to deliver a certain weight of gold and silver of a certain fineness to be ascertained by count. Damages for non-performance of a contract may be recovered at law as for non-performance of a contract to deliver bullion or other commodity, but whether the contract be for delivery or payment of coin or bullion or other property, damages for non-performance must be assessed in lawful money, that is to say, in money declared to be legal tender in payment by a law made in pursuance of the Constitution of the United States. It was not necessary in the case of Bronson vs. Rodes, nor is it necessary now to decide the question whether the acts making United States notes legal tender are warranted by the Constitution. We express no opinion on that point, but assume, for the present, the constitutionality of those acts. Proceeding upon this assumption, we find two descriptions of lawful money in use under the acts of Congress, in either of which damages for non-performance of contracts, whether made before or since the passage of the Currency acts, may be properly assessed in the absence of any different understanding or agreement between parties. But the obvious intent in contracts for payment in coin or gold against fluctuations in the medium of payment warrants the inference that it was the understanding of the parties that such contracts should be satisfied, whether before or after the judgment, only by tender of coin; while the absence of any express stipulation as to description in contracts for payment of money, generally warrants the opposite inference of an understanding between parties that such contracts may be satisfied before or after judgment by the tender of any lawful money. This inference as to contracts made prior to the passage of the acts making United States notes legal tender is strengthened by the consideration that those acts not only do not prohibit, but by strong implication sanction contracts since their passage for the payment or delivery of coin; and consequently, taken in connection with the provision of the act of 1862, concerning money of account, require the damages upon such contracts to be assessed in coin and judgment rendered accordingly; leaving the assessment of damages for breach of other contracts to be made and judgment rendered in lawful money. It would be unreasonable to suppose that the Legislature intended a different rule, as to contracts prior to the enactment of the Currency laws, from that sanctioned by them in respect to contracts since. We are of the opinion, therefore, that assessments of damages, whether in coin or lawful money, severally, that judgments upon such assessments should be in conformity to the stipulation of contracts in regard to the medium of payment. It follows then, that in the case before us, the judgment was erroneously entered. The damages should be assessed at the sum agreed to be due, with the interest in gold and sentatives, and again in 1845. In 1847 he was again a member of the House of Representatives of Maine, and on the 28th of May, 1848, he was elected to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of JOHN FAIRFIELD. In 1851, at the expiration of his term, he was re-elected. In 1856 he was chosen Governor of Maine, but in February, 1857, was again elected to the United States Senate and resigned the Governorship to accept that position. In 1860 he was nominated by the Republicans for Vice-President, on the ticket with ABRAHAM LINCOLN, and was elected. He was again a candidate for that position in 1864, but the nomination was bestowed upon ANDREW JOHNSON and Mr. HAMLIN retired to private life. Mr. JOHNSON, who had become President through the death of Mr. LINCOLN, appointed him, in 1865, Collector of Customs at Boston, Mass., which position he accepted and held until the following Summer, when, disapproving the policy of President JOHNSON he resigned, and took the stump in Maine in favor of the Congressional plan of Reconstruction. Since then he has taken no part in political affairs, dividing his time between his home in Bangor and his farm in Brewer. Originally a Democrat, he left the party in 1854, at the time of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, and took an active part in the formation and organization of the Republican Party in Maine.

William A. Buckingham, of Connecticut.

WILLIAM A. BUCKINGHAM, Republican, was born in Lebanon, Conn., May 24, 1804, and, having received a good education in that town, removed when 20 years of age to this City to acquaint himself with the duties of mercantile life. Subsequently he returned to Connecticut and established himself as a merchant in Norwich, which has since been his place of residence. In 1858 he was elected Governor of Connecticut, and by successive annual elections was retained in that office by the people of the State until 1865. Throughout the war he was found an able and prompt advocate and supporter of the policy of President LINCOLN, and an efficient assistant of the General Government in the means adopted for the suppression of the rebellion.

Reuben E. Fenton, of New-York.

REUBEN E. FENTON, Republican, is a native of this State, having been born in Carroll, Chautauqua County, on the 1st of July, 1819. He studied law, but engaged in mercantile pursuits for many years, even after entering public life. His first public office was Supervisor of the town of Carroll, to which he was elected in 1843. In 1852 he was chosen a member of the Thirty-third Congress, and in 1856 he was again elected to Congress. He was returned to the Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Congresses, but resigned in 1865 to accept the Governorship of this State. During his service in the House of Representatives he filled important positions on committees and was an able and influential member. He was reëlected Governor of New-York in 1866, and remained in that office until the 1st of January last, when his official term expired. At the Chicago Republican Convention he was a prominent candidate for the nomination for the Vice-Presidency. He was elected United States Senator after a severe contest, but a bitter contest, between him and Hon. EDWIN D. MORGAN, the present Senator, being the rival candidate for the position.

John P. Stockton, of New-Jersey.

JOHN P. STOCKTON, Democrat, was born in Princeton, N. J., on the 2d of August, 1825. He graduated at Princeton College in 1843, was admitted to the Bar in 1846, and commenced practice three years later. By appointment of the State Legislature he revised the laws of New-Jersey, and he was for several years the State Reporter in Chancery, in which position he published three volumes. In 1858 President BUCHANAN appointed him Minister Resident at Rome; on the election of Mr. LINCOLN he was recalled at his own request. He resumed the practice of law in his native State, and in 1865 he was elected to the United States Senate. His right to a seat, owing to an alleged illegality in his election, was disputed, and this gave rise to a prolonged and bitter debate. His claim to his seat was first confirmed by a vote of 22 to 21, the deciding vote being cast by himself. The question however was reconsidered, and as he withdrew his vote he lost his seat on the 27th of March, 1866. The Legislature of his State was unable to agree upon his successor, the two political parties being so divided in that body that one vote was sufficient to prevent a joint convention of the two Houses. Congress, however, passed the law regulating the mode of election of United States Senators, and Hon. ALEXANDER G. CATTELL was finally elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. STOCKTON'S father and grandfather both served in the United States Senate, and his great-grandfather was one of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

John Scott, of Pennsylvania.

JOHN SCOTT, Republican, of Pennsylvania, has heretofore taken no prominent part in political affairs. He was born in Alexandria, Huntingdon County, Penn., in 1824. He studied law with Judge THOMPSON, at Chambersburg, Penn., and was admitted to the Bar in 1846. He settled in Huntingdon borough immediately afterward, and has resided there ever since, actively engaged in the practice of his profession. During the past ten years he has been solicitor for the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company, and his practice has long been large and lucrative. Previous to the war he was a Douglas Democrat; he was bitterly opposed to the election of Mr. BUCHANAN in 1856. When the rebels fired upon Fort Sumter he warmly espoused the cause of the Government, and he has acted cordially and enthusiastically with the Republican Party ever since. In 1862 he was elected to the Legislature of Pennsylvania by the Republicans, and this is, we believe, the only political office he has ever held. His election to the Senate was a great surprise even to the party in his own State, very peculiar circumstances having accomplished the result. His father was a representative in the State Legislature, and was a member of Congress from 1829 to 1831.

William T. Hamilton, of Maryland.

WILLIAM T. HAMILTON, Democrat, was born in Hagerstown, Md., in 1821. He was graduated at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Penn., and, having studied law in Hagerstown, was admitted to the Bar of Washington County in 1845. In the following year he was elected a member of the Maryland House of Representatives, but was defeated at the election in 1847. He was a Presidential Elector on the Democratic ticket in 1848, and was elected to Congress in 1849, where he became a warm supporter of the Clay compromise measures. In 1851 and 1853 he was re-elected to Congress, but in 1855 he was defeated. In 1861 he was tendered the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland, but declined to accept. He remained in the quiet pursuit of his professional duties until his recent election to the Senate.

Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware.

THOMAS F. BAYARD, Democrat, is a native of Delaware, and a son of Hon. JAMES A. BAYARD, whom he succeeds in the Senate. He is a lawyer by profession, and about 45 years of age. He has been prominent in his profession in his native State, but his entrance into the Senate will be his first appearance in a political position. His grandfather, as well as his father, and his uncle, RICHARD H. BAYARD, have been members of the United States Senate.

Abijah Gilbert, of Florida.

Mr. GILBERT, Republican, was elected several months ago, by the Legislature of Florida, to succeed ADONIJAH S. WELCH as Senator from that State. The terms of the general law were not complied with in this election, however, and at the recent session of the Legislature an earnest effort was made to nullify the previous action, and to choose some one else to fill the position. This movement failed, and the question will come before the Senate for its decision.

William G. Brownlow, of Tennessee.

WILLIAM G. BROWNLOW, Republican, of Tennessee, has had a checkered career; and has been, perhaps, as cordially hated by his political opponents as any man now prominent in political life. He was born in Wythe County, Virginia, on the 29th of August, 1805, and being left an orphan at the age of 11 years was compelled to labor upon a farm until he was 18. He then learned the trade of a carpenter, and devoted himself to that until he had obtained the means to go to school and obtain a tolerable education. At the age of 21 he entered the Methodist ministry, and for ten years he was an itinerant preacher. Having removed to Tennessee he was sent, in 1852, as a delegate to the General Conference of the Church which was held in Philadelphia. In the same year he traveled a circuit in South Carolina, and while there entered into the political contest, taking strong grounds against JOHN C. CALHOUN, in favor of the Union in the nullification controversy. Fierce opposition was excited against him by this procedure, and he published a pamphlet in his own vindication. About the same time he engaged in a controversy with a clergyman of another denomination upon the position of the Methodists with regard to slavery, and published a pamphlet in which he said: "I have paid some attention to this subject, (slavery,) young as I am, because it is one day to shake this Government to its very foundation. I expect to live to see that day, and not be an old man at that. While I shall advocate the owning of men, women and children, as you say our discipline styles slaves, I shall, if I am living when the battle comes, stand by my Government and the Union formed by our fathers, as Mr. WESLEY stood by the British Government, of which he was a loyal subject." Mr. BROWNLOW began his political career as early as 1828, in Tennessee, as an advocate of the election of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS to the Presidency. In 1837 he became editor of the Knoxville Whig, and from his articles in this, and from his course in political matters, he obtained a national reputation as "the Fighting Parson." He retained his connection with the Whig until January last. In 1838 he visited Philadelphia to engage in a public debate with Rev. ABRAM PAYNE, of this city, on the subject of slavery, in which he earnestly defended the institution as it existed in the Southern States. From the commencement of the secession movement he boldly maintained the cause of the Union in his paper, arguing, with other things, that it was the best safeguard of Southern institutions; and, after the rebels were driven out of Tennessee, he added to his journal the additional title of The Rebel Ventilator. His course brought him much persecution, and he was arrested Dec. 6, 1861, after being deceived and placing himself within the power of the rebels at Knoxville. He was thrown into jail on a charge of treason, and detained there about three weeks, when he was released on civil process, but immediately rearrested by the rebel military authorities, and kept under guard in his own house until March, 3, 1862. He then came North and made a tour of the country, delivering speeches to large crowds in all the principal cities. He resided in Cincinnati until he could return to Knoxville, where he resumed the publication of the Whig, which, of course, had been temporarily interrupted. On the 4th of March, 1865, he was elected Governor of Tennessee, and was reëlected in 1867. Having been elected to the United States Senate, he resigned the Governorship on the 25th of February inst. His health has long been quite feeble, and in May last it was supposed that he was in a dying condition. His political opponents in Tennessee and elsewhere were quite confident that he would never be able reach Washington.

Arthur I. Boreman, of West Virginia.

ARTHUR I. BOREMAN, Republican, of West Virginia, has never served in Congress, and has not been much known outside of his own State. In the politics of that State, however, he has taken a prominent part during the past six years. In 1863, when the State of Virginia was divided and West Virginia constructed, he was elected Governor of the latter, there being no opposition. In 1864 he was again unanimously elected, receiving 19,098 votes. He was elected for the third time in 1866, receiving 23,802 votes to 17,158 votes for BENJAMIN H. SMITH, the Democratic candidate. He declined a reëlection in 1868.

Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio.

ALLEN G. THURMAN, Democrat, of Ohio, was born in 1814, and passed his earlier years in Chillicothe, Ross Co., Ohio. In 1833 he removed to Columbus, and that city has since been his home. He studied law in the office of Hon. WILLIAM ALLEN, of Chillicothe, and was admitted to the Bar in 1835, being then in his twenty-second year. In 1844 he was elected a member of the Twenty-ninth Congress, and served upon the Judiciary Committee. At the close of his term he declined a reëlection. In the Fall of 1851 he was elected by the Democrats Judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio. In Ross County, where he resided, he ran about 900 votes ahead of his party ticket, and he received a majority of the votes cast in the county, although it was at the time strongly Whig. He held the office of Judge for four years. In 1867 he was supported by his party as their candidate for Governor of the State, but was defeated by 2,983 votes in a total vote of 484,227.

Daniel D. Pratt, of Indiana.

DANIEL D. PRATT, Republican, was born at Palermo, Me., in 1813. His father, a physician, soon after removed to New-York. The son, at the age of thirteen, entered Hamilton College, and graduated with very high honors four years later. In the Spring of 1832, on foot and alone, he left home for the Great West, with no capital but his natural abilities, his education and a good character. He reached Cincinnati in April, and soon after engaged as teacher of a common school in Lawrenceburg, Dearborn County, Ind., which position he held until the following Spring, when he was elected principal of a seminary at Rising Sun, Ohio County, then a flourishing institution in the southeastern portion of Indiana. In 1834 he resigned and went to Indianapolis, where he began the study of the law in the office of FLETCHER & BUTLER, at the time among the leading members of the Bar of the State. In 1836 he was admitted to practice and settled at Logansport, Cass County, Ind., which has since been his place of residence. In 1837 he was nominated by the Whigs for Congress, as Representative from the Ninth District, but was defeated by a small majority. In 1851 he was a member of the Indiana House of Representatives, and he was reëlected in 1853. In 1856 he was the Republican candidate for District Elector, and since the organization of that party, he has been its zealous and ardent supporter. In 1860 he was one of the Delegates at Large from Indiana to the National Republican Convention at Chicago, and was selected as its reading clerk, having a voice of wonderful power. In 1863 his party friends in the Legislature complimented him by the nomination for United States Senator, but the Legislature was largely Democratic, and he was not elected. In October, 1868, he was elected by the Republicans to Congress as Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX'S successor from the Ninth District of Indiana, and would have taken his seat in the lower House of the Forty-first Congress, had he not subsequently been elected United States Senator.

Matthew Hale Carpenter, of Wisconsin.

MATTHEW H. CARPENTER, or MATT CARPENTER, as he is familiarly and usually called, a Republican, was born in Vermont, near the town of Waterbury, in the year 1826. When 12 years of age he was adopted by PAUL DILLINGHAM, a distinguished lawyer of Vermont, and afterward Governor of that State. Through his influence and that of other friends who had appreciated his natural ability and force of character, young CARPENTER received an appointment to the Military Academy at West Point, but after passing two years at the Academy he abandoned the military profession and entered upon the study of law in the office of RUFUS CHOATE, the eminent and highly successful lawyer of Boston. In 1848 he removed to Beloit, Wis., and entered upon the practice of his profession in that town with flattering prospects of success. But a few months after going thither he was attacked by a disease of his eyes, and so severe did this become that for eighteen months he was totally blind. He came to this City for medical treatment, which fortunately was successful, and restored to him his sight. He returned to Beloit in 1851, and after a few years' practice was elected District-Attorney for the county. This election was at once a high compliment to his legal ability, and an indication of his personal popularity, as the other candidates on the same ticket were all defeated by over 1,500 votes. In 1860 he removed to Milwaukee, and during his residence in that city has deservedly been acknowledged to be one of the most prominent, able and learned lawyers in Wisconsin. About a year since he won a national reputation for argumentative skill, learning and ability, by his argument in Washington before the Supreme Court of the United States, in favor of the constitutionality of the Reconstruction acts of Congress. He was originally a Democrat in politics, but at the commencement of the war he abandoned that party, and became a steadfast supporter of the policy of the Government and an earnest advocate of the abolition of slavery. Although so long prominent in the Courts of the State of his adoption, he has heretofore kept himself aloof from the strife for political advancement, and his entrance into the United States Senate will be his first experience as an office-holder. He a few weeks since addressed a large meeting in Milwaukee on the subject of temperance, taking strong ground in favor of personal appeals to the victims of the thirst for intoxicating drinks, as preferable to the enactment of prohibitory laws, and at the close of the meeting, in order to give evidence of the sincerity of his convictions, publicly added his name to the pledge which was circulated for signatures among those who composed the audience.

Carl Schurz, of Missouri.

CARL SCHURZ, Republican, was born on the 2d of March, 1819, at Liblar, near Cologne, in Prussia. For his active and open participation in the revolution of 1848, he was compelled to leave his native country, and after having passed three years in Paris and London, he came to America. Settling temporarily in Philadelphia, he studied law for three years in the Quaker City and then removed to Wisconsin. This was in 1855, and in the Presidential canvass of the following year he began to take an active part in the political affairs of this country, ardently and enthusiastically advocating the election of JOHN C. FREMONT to the Presidency. In 1860 he was chosen a delegate to the National Republican Convention, which nominated ABRAHAM LINCOLN for the Presidency, and in 1861 he was appointed by Mr. LINCOLN Minister to Spain. He remained at Madrid, however, but a few months. He returned to this country in December, 1861, to extend his personal assistance to the National Government in its efforts to suppress the rebellion. He was first made a Brigadier-General of Volunteers, and was assigned on the 17th of June, 1862, to the command of a division in a corps then under command of Gen. FRANZ SIGEL. For distinguished services he was promoted to the position of Major-General of Volunteers. At the close of the war he was appointed Commissioner of the Government to inquire into and report upon the condition of the Southern States. In 1866 he beame editor of the Detroit Post, and while under his direction that paper was noted for the marked ability with which it was conducted, and the intense radicalism of the position which it assumed and maintained. After remaining in Detroit about two years, he was invited to remove to St. Louis and assume editorial control of the Westliche Post, a German newspaper, Republican in politics, of much influence among the citizens of that nationality in the West. He accepted the offer, and was occupying that position when called by the voice of the people of Missouri, expressed through their Representatives in the State Legislature, to take a seat in the Senate of the United States. Soon after his election it was extensively circulated, and his political opponents found much consolation in the belief that he was constitutionally ineligible to a seat in the Senate, on the ground that the Federal Constitution prescribes that a Senator must have been nine years a citizen of the United States, and that he had been naturalized only two years; but this rumor received its quietus when it was ascertained that he had legally become a citizen during his residence in Wisconsin, previous to the commencement of the war.

Eugene Casserly, of California.

EUGENE CASSERLY, Democrat, is a native of Ireland, in which country he was born in 1822. It is a curious coincidence that Hon. JOHN CONNESS, Republican, whose successor he is to be, was born in Ireland and in the same year. His parents brought him to New-York when he was but two years of age, and he was carefully and faithfully educated by his father, who was an able and successful teacher of the Greek and Latin languages. When but 19 years old he assisted his father in the preparation of an edition of Casserly's Greek Reader for the press. He entered upon the study of law, and in the year 1844 he was admitted to the Bar in this City. Here he practiced his profession for several years, and engaged also in journalistic labors. He removed to San Francisco, Cal., in 1850, and has since resided in that city. During the war, although a Democrat, he was an undeviating opponent of the rebellion, and his election to the Senate by a Democratic Legislature was a severe rebuke to the disloyal element of that party on the Pacific coast. He has an entire faith in the future of the great State which he is in part to represent in the halls of Congress, and at a dinner recently given him by his friends in this City, who desired to extend to him a welcome on his return to the scene of his first struggles in life after an absence of nearly twenty years, said that on the Pacific coast it was seriously discussed whether men are to speak in the future of San Francisco as the New-York of the Pacific, or of New-York as the San Francisco of the Atlantic.

The Changes in Brief.

The changes in the Senate, which will take place, are briefly as follows:

HANNIBAL HAMLIN, Republican, of Maine, in place of LOT M. MORRILL, Republican.

WILLIAM A. BUCKINGHAM, Republican, of Connecticut, in place of JAMES DIXON, elected as a Union-Conservative, but now a Democrat.

REUBEN E. FENTON, Republican, of New-York, in place of EDWIN D. MORGAN, Republican.

JOHN P. STOCKTON, Democrat, of New-Jersey, in place of FREDERICK T. FRELINGHUYSEN, Republican.

JOHN SCOTT, Republican, of Pennsylvania, in place of CHARLES R. BUCKALEW, Democrat.

THOMAS F. BAYARD, Democrat, of Delaware, in place of JAMES A. BAYARD, Democrat.

WILLIAM T. HAMILTON, Democrat, of Maryland, in place of WILLIAM PINKNEY WHYTE, Democrat.

ARTHUR I. BOREMAN, Republican, of West Virginia, in place of PETER G. VAN WINKLE, Republican.

ABIJAH GILBERT, Republican, of Florida, in place of A. S. WELCH, Republican.

ALLEN G. THURMAN, Democrat, of Ohio, in place of BENJAMIN F. WADE, Republican.

DANIEL D. PRATT, Republican, of Indiana, in place of THOMAS A. HENDRICKS, Democrat.

WILLIAM G. BROWNLOW, Republican, of Tennessee, in place of DAVID T. PATTERSON, elected as a Republican, but now a Democrat.

CARL SCHURZ, Republican, of Missouri, in place of JOHN B. HENDERSON, Republican.

MATTHEW H. CARPENTER, Republican, of Wisconsin, in place of JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, elected as a Republican, but now a Democrat.

EUGENE CASSERLY, Democrat, of California, in place of JOHN CONNESS, Republican.

Then the following Senators, whose terms had expired, and all of whom are Republicans, have been reëlected:

CHARLES SUMNER, of Massachusetts;
WILLIAM SPRAGUE, of Rhode Island;
GEORGE F. EDMUNDS, of Vermont;
ZACHARIAH CHANDLER, of Michigan;
ALEXANDER RAMSEY, of Minnesota;
THOMAS W. TIPTON, of Nebraska;
WILLIAM M. STEWART, of Nevada.

SIMON M'CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, was first elected to the Senate in 1845, and his first service in that body ante-dates that of all his colleagues. He has, however, served in all but ten years, while CHARLES SUMNER, of Massachusetts, has held his seat for eighteen years, consecutively, and HANNIBAL HAMLIN, of Maine, has been a member of the Senate thirteen years, in addition to five years, during which, being Vice-President, he presided over its deliberations.

The States of Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, not yet having been reconstructed, are not at present represented in the Senate, and the State of Georgia, although it has elected two Senators, has not yet been admitted to representation in that body.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

List of Members—Its Political Complexion.

A full House of Representatives consists of two hundred and forty-three members. Tennessee, however, claims an additional member in the Forty-first Congress, and has elected JOHN B. ROGERS as Congressman from the State at large. His right to a seat as such must be decided by the House. Counting him, two hundred and seven members of the two hundred and forty-four have been elected. The vacancies will be filled by elections hereafter, the details of which are stated below. Following is a list of the members already chosen, the names of Democrats being printed in italics, a * signifying that the present member from the district has been reëlected, a † that his seat is contested, and g that the election of the member is a gain to his party:

RECAPITULATION.

	Fortieth Congress.	Forty-first Congress.
Republicans	173	137
Democrats	49	70
Vacancies	21	17
Yet to be chosen	..	20
Total	243	244

States Not Represented.

The States of Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, not yet having been reconstructed, are denied representation in Congress. When they have complied with the requirements of the Reconstruction acts, Virginia will be entitled to eight members, Mississippi to five and Texas to four—total, seventeen.

Alabama is entitled to six members, but no election has yet been ordered in that State.

Georgia is entitled to seven members, and the election is ordered to take place on the first Monday (the 8th day) of April next. A bill was passed by the State Legislature providing for an election of members in November last; but, through the non-action of the Governor, it failed to become a law. Both parties, however, made their nominations at that time, and these candidates will probably be voted for in April. The present delegation consists of four Republicans and two Democrats, and there is one vacancy. The majorities in the several districts were, in 1868, as follows: First District, 3,839 Republican; Second, 1,949 Democratic; Third, 1,225 Republican; Fourth, 161 Republican; Sixth, 413 Democratic, but this result was contested by the Republican candidate; Seventh, 3,100 Democratic. In the Fifth District there was no regular opposition to the Republican candidate, although three or four thousand votes were cast for Henry W. Hilliard, Democrat, an independent nomination. The candidates nominated last Fall for the Forty-first Congress are as follows:

Republican.	Democratic.
1. John W. Clift.*	1. A. H. Hansell.
2. William P. Pierce.	2. Nelson Tift.*
3. John H. Caldwell.	3. Hugh Buchanan.
4. B. B. De Graffenreid.	4. Thomas G. Lawson.
5. Charles H. Prince.*	5. William H. Mallon.
6. John A. Wimpy.	6. Wier Boyd.
7. James Atkins.	7. P. M. B. Young.*

Elections are yet to be held in New-Hampshire and Connecticut. In New-Hampshire the election will take place on Tuesday, March 9. The nominations are as follows, the delegation in the Fortieth Congress being composed entirely of Republicans:

Republican.	Democratic.
1. Jacob H. Ela.*	1. Ellery A. Hibbard.
2. Aaron F. Stevens.*	2. Edw'd W. Harrington.
3. Jacob Benton.*	3. Hosea W. Parker.

The Republican majorities at the last election, in 1867, were as follows: First District, 996; Second, 955; Third, 1,048.

The election in Connecticut will take place on Monday, April 5. The nominations have not yet been completed. So far as they have been made they are as follows:

Republican.	Democratic.
1. Julius L. Strong.	1. James Dixon.
2. Stephen W. Kellogg.	2. James F. Babcock.
3. Sidney B. Beardsley.	3. Abiel Converse.*

The delegation from Connecticut in the Fortieth Congress is composed of one Republican and three Democrats. The majorities at the election in 1867 were as follows: First District, 917 Democratic; Second, 1,793 Democratic; Third, 1,896 Republican; Fourth, 980 Democratic. As the result in the last-named district was disputed, and the question has not been settled.

Contested Seats.

There will be an unusual number of contests relative to seats in the House. Among the number are the following:

INDIANA.—JOHN S. REID, Democrat, will contest the seat of GEORGE W. JULIAN, Republican, as Representative from the Fourth District. The vote in the district was declared as follows: JULIAN, 13,413; REID, 13,297; JULIAN'S majority, 116. The seat of DANIEL W. VOORHEES, Democrat, as Representative from the Sixth District of the same State, is contested by WILLIAM WIRT CARTER, Republican. The vote in this district was declared as follows: CARTER, 16,454; VOORHEES, 16,582; VOORHEES' majority, 128.

KENTUCKY.—Col. SIDNEY M. BARNES, Republican, will contest the seat of Hon. GEORGE M. ADAMS, Jr., Democrat, as Representative from the Eighth District. The vote in this district was officially declared as follows: BARNES, 9,861; ADAMS, 10,323; ADAMS' majority, 462.

LOUISIANA.—There is a dispute in regard to the seats of all the members from this State. The House on Saturday refused to permit J. WILLIS MENARD, who has the Governor's certificate, to occupy a seat even during the remainder of the Fortieth Congress. He was elected to fill a vacancy at the same time that the claimants to seats in the Forty-first Congress were chosen, and the Clerk of the House may take this as an intimation of the propriety of omitting the names of the members-elect from his roll.

MARYLAND.—Judge DANIEL WEISEL, Republican, will probably contest the seat of PATRICK HAMILL, Democrat, as Representative from the Fourth District. The vote in this district was declared as follows: WEISEL, 11,653; HAMILL, 12,239; HAMILL'S majority, 586.

MISSOURI.—WILLIAM A. PILE, Republican, will contest the seat of ERASTUS WELLS, Democrat, as Representative from the First District. The vote in the district was as follows: PILE, 9,553; WELLS, 9,734; WELLS' majority, 181. Gen. JAMES SHIELDS, Democrat, will contest the seat of ROBERT T. VAN HORN, Republican, as Representative from the Sixth District. The vote in the district was as follows: VAN HORN, 5,427; SHIELDS, 4,560; VAN HORN'S majority, 867. WILLIAM T. SWITZLER, Democrat, will contest the seat of DAVID P. DYER, Republican, as Representative from the Ninth District. The vote in this District was: DYER, 5,407: SWITZLER, 4,975; DYER'S majority, 432.

NEW-JERSEY.—Hon. GEORGE A. HALSEY, Republican, will contest the seat of ORESTES CLEVELAND, Democrat, as Representative from the Fifth District. The vote was declared as follows: HALSEY, 16,862; CLEVELAND, 19,110; CLEVELAND'S majority 2,248.

NEW-YORK.—The seat of GEORGE W. GREEN, Democrat, as Representative from the Eleventh District, will be contested by CHARLES H. VANWYCK, Republican. The vote as declared was; VANWYCK, 11,298; GREEN, 11,620; GREEN'S majority 322.

OHIO.—The seat of PHILIP W. STRADER, Democrat, as Representative from the First District, will be contested by BENJAMIN EGGLESTON, Republican. The vote was declared to be: EGGLESTON, 10,272; STRADER, 10,483; STRADER'S majority 211. JOHN M. ASHLEY, Republican, will contest the seat of TRUMAN H. HOAG as Representative from the Tenth District. The vote was declared to be: ASHLEY, 14,595; HOAG, 15,507; HOAG'S majority 912.

PENNSYLVANIA.—LEONARD MYERS, Republican, will contest the seat of JOHN MOFFATT, Democrat, as Representative from the Third District. The vote was declared to be: MYERS, 13,729; MOFFAT, 13,856; MOFFATT'S majority, 127. CALEB N. TAYLOR, Republican, will contest the seat of JOHN R. READING, Democrat, as Representative from the Fifth District. The vote was declared to be; TAYLOR, 13,158; READING, 13,199; READING'S majority, 41. JOHN COVODE, Republican, will contest the seat of HENRY D. FOSTER, Democrat, as Representative from the Twenty-first District. The vote was declared to be, COVODE, 13,766; FOSTER, 13,807; FOSTER'S majority, 41. Frauds appeared so clearly in this District that Gov. GEARY has withheld the certificate of election.

TENNESSEE—C. A. SHEAFE, Democrat, will contest the seat of LEWIS TILLMAN, Republican, as Representative from the Fourth District. Gov. BROWNLOW, in a proclamation announcing the result in the district, said the returns in the office of the Secretary of State give SHEAFE 666 majority, but, "correcting the returns by the law governing in such cases, by throwing out the vote of Lincoln County, as the election was held by order of the County Court, and the returns were made by the Coroner—the law requiring elections to be held and returns made by the Commissioner of Registration; and by throwing out the vote in the civil districts of the Counties of Coffee and Marshall, in which it appeared the the judges of election had not taken the necessary oath, the vote of the district would stand as follows: For SHEAFE, 3,363, and for TILLMAN, 3,795, leaving TILLMAN'S majority 432." He therefore awarded the certificate to LEWIS TILLMAN. JOHN W. LEFTWITCH, Democrat, contests the seat of W. J. SMITH, Republican, as Representative from the Eighth District. With reference to the result in this district, Gov. BROWNLOW, in the same proclamation, says:

"The returns from the Eighth District show that JOHN W. LEFTWITCH received 6,532 votes; W. J. SMITH 5,543 votes, and DAVID A. NUNN 4,026 votes, giving LEFTWITCH 189 majority over SMITH. I utterly repudiate the vote of Tipton County as an exhibition of the most stupendous fraud perpetrated in the State during the late election. I also cast out the vote of Fayette County, as held in open violation of the Franchise law. Besides these, a supplemental return by the Commissioner of Registration for Shelby County gives, for that county alone, an addition of 709 votes in favor of W. J. SMITH over LEFTWITCH, all of which gives SMITH a clear majority of over a thousand above LEFTWITCH. I therefore award the certificate of election to W. J. SMITH. *

A valid registration becomes indispensable to a valid election. With official information before me that the votes cast for a candidate are illegal and his election void, and that the KUKLUX Klans have used violence and other means of intimidation to deter legal voters from exercising the franchise, I cannot, and will not, certify that he is 'regularly elected according to the laws of the State.' Whatever others may think of my duty, I will not declare, in a certificate or otherwise, that the election was regular in counties or districts, when I officially know it was not regular. In these conclusions I am highly relieved of much respon

Cayes in the war steamer Alexandre Petron, and immediately made his preparations for attacking the place, the plan being for the Government troops now investing the town to advance upon it, and the Petron to open upon the forts defending the harbor. SALNAVE gave notice to the Consular agents that he would allow twenty-four hours for the foreign residents in AUX CAYES to leave the place, should they wish to do so. Not only the foreigners, but large numbers of the natives of the town availed themselves of the privilege, taking refuge, most of them, in merchant vessels in the harbor. Two ships, one English and the other French, took about 300 Haytians to Kingston, Jamaica. Everything that could be done was done by Mr. HOLLISTER, the American Minister, who was at AUX CAYES, by the Captain of the British war vessel Jason, and other influential foreigners, to induce DOMINGUE to surrender AUX CAYES, and thus to prevent bloodshed and the certain destruction of the place should SALNAVE bombard it; but all in vain. DOMINGUE and the other revolutionists, however, expressed their determination to defend it to the last extremity. The state of affairs in AUX CAYES was very distressing. Provisions could scarcely be had at any price, and there was very little flour in the town. Many of the Haytians who went to Jamaica left with only the clothes on their backs. Only women and children were allowed to leave. All males above the age of 16 were being pressed into the rebel service, and every picket captured was shot in public by orders of DOMINGUE. Before the steamer Zodiac left Port-au-Prince for New-York, news was received that SALNAVE had attacked the forts at AUX CAYES, and after cannonading them ineffectually for two days, had drawn off to Petit Riviere, the ammunition of the Petron being exhausted. He had sent to Port-au-Prince for a fresh supply of ammunition, and would return to AUX CAYES as soon as he received it, and renew his operations against the place.

Minister HOLLISTER had visited Jeremie and Jacmel in the Nipsic. At the latter place he had an interview with the Committee of Public Safety, whom he assured of the deep interest felt by the American Government in the fate of Hayti, telling them, at the same time, that his Government highly disapproved of the improper use that had been made of the American flag by the Haytians. The Committee had issued a decree forbidding all Haytians capable of bearing arms to leave the country at present. Those attempting to leave, if captured, were to be shot, and the property of these making good their escape was to be confiscated.

In the north the insurgents were still holding their ground. They had attacked Gonaives, and succeeded in getting into the town, but the arrival of one of SALNAVE'S steamers had compelled them to evacuate it. The steamer Mount Vernon had arrived at St. Marc, and, after discharging her cargo there, proceeded to Inagua, and towed back to St. Marc a schooner said to be loaded with arms and ammunition.

Mr. TATE, Minister of Finance, had resigned his portfolio. Rear-Admiral NICKELS, of the Alexandre Petron, was reported sick, and was about leaving for home. Capt. HUGGINS, of the steamer Salnave, had disappeared, and it was supposed that he had gone to Jamaica. The American house of CUTTS & Co. had made a contract with the Haytian Government for the delivery of 2,000 tons of coal for the use of the Haytian navy.

THE POWELL WILL CASE.

A Decision to be Given in a Day or Two.

Correspondence of the New-York Times

NEWBURG, N. Y., Monday, March 1, 1869.

The great case of FOWLER and CULVERT against Mrs. FRANCIS RAMSDELL will be decided in a day or two in the Surrogate's Court. The whole of the evidence has been before the Surrogate, Hon. GILBERT O. HULSE, the case having been closed last week, and he will render his decision in a day or two. The two contestants are daughters of Mr. ROBERT POWELL, the only married son of Mrs. MARY POWELL, the lady who left the property in dispute; and they claim that Mr. and Mrs. RAMSDELL gained an improper influence over the deceased lady, and treated her like a child. The property in dispute amounts to nearly $2,500,000. Mr. RAMSDELL, who was the principal agent in obtaining the signature to the will, came to this City about forty years ago, without friends or acquaintances, and in the greatest poverty. He was fortunate enough, however, to obtain in marriage one of Mrs. POWELL'S daughters, and immediately became a rising man. Having become a stockholder in the Erie Railroad, he soon obtained the position of President of the road, which he held for a considerable time. He is now one of the Erie Directors. Mr. RAMSDELL and his wife have lived for a long time in Mrs. POWELL'S magnificent mansion at Newburg, where they managed to secure complete control of everything. This was the more easy from the fact that Mrs. POWELL had imbibed spiritualist ideas, and had visions of the new Jerusalem and a host of wonders besides. At one time the great spiritualist HOME resided in her house, and ministered to her mystical fancies. Mrs. POWELL was of the family of the LUDLOWS, several of whom were distinguished officers in the United States Navy during the war of 1812. One of them was a Lieutenant with Capt. LAWRENCE. Mr. ROBERT POWELL, her son, married Miss ORSO, who is descended, on her mother's side, from the excellent family of the RUMSEYS of Maryland. It is alleged that Mr. RAMSDELL unfairly induced Mrs. POWELL to leave all her property to himself and his wife, and thus cut off the daughters of Mrs. POWELL from all participation in the estate of their grandmother. The case has excited a great deal of interest in this locality, and the decision of the Surrogate is anxiously expected.

LABOR MOVEMENTS.

The Printers' Strike.

The journeymen book and job printers on strike transacted no business at their Botanic Hall meeting, yesterday afternoon, beyond receiving new members. It was stated that an official dispatch had been received from Cambridge, Mass., to the effect that all the offices there were now paying the new scale of prices—45 and 47 cents per 1,000 ems.

EMPLOYING PRINTERS.

The employing printers met yesterday at the Astor House to discuss affairs connected with the strike. Favorable reports were received at all the offices to the effect that they were steadily receiving new workmen, and that although their hands could be employed to advantage, the number was not so urgent as it had been. The following resolutions were passed reaffirming their opposition to the strike, and their intention to resist it;

Resolved, That we are as determined now as when the arbitrary and unreasonable demands of the Printers' "Union" were made upon us, to resist the domination of an organization whose members are largely made up of those who have little, if any, connection with our special branch of the printing business.

Resolved, That we have the satisfaction of believing that our resistance to this unjust and ill-judged "strike" has effectually prevented the enforcement of other arbitrary measures which were to follow, had "Union" been recognized as the master of our establishments.

Resolved, That, accepting the statements of this "Union as being correct, it has succeeded in depriving one-tenth of its members of the privilege of earning a livelihood, and compelled the remainder to support them in idleness; while it has wholly failed to coerce into a compliance with its tyrannical and unreasonable demands.

Resolved, That the scale of prices which has been generally adopted by the employing printers is admitted by intelligent compositors to be fair and equitable; and, in offering it to the journeymen, we were desirous of satisfying them that we were willing to do all that our business permitted,—our only condition being that we would not be controlled by men whose "Union" seemingly was formed for the purpose of taking the management of our offices out of the hands of their rightful owners.

The Eight-Hour Movement.

An attempt will be made this week to ward off any possible strike on the part of the Bricklayers' Union for eight hours as a day's labor. Committees from both the Union and employers will meet to discuss the question. Perhaps a compromise upon nine hours will be made, and perhaps the eight hours will be acceded to on condition of the reduction of $1 a day from the wages of the men.

The Case of Philip Dickel.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In correction of a narrative in your Sunday issue concerning the arrest and subsequent release of a Prussian fugitive, we beg to state the follow ing facts: PHILIP DICKEL, a lumber dealer from the Prussian province of Nassau, was prosecuted for frauds and forgeries committed on private parties in business connections. Advised by the Prussian Government of his departure to the United States in the steamer Etna, the Consul-General of the North German Union, Dr. ROSING, caused the fugitive to be arrested. A subsequent dispatch from Count BISMARCK authorized the Consul to drop further proceeding inasmuch as the greater portion of the proceeds of the forgeries had been recovered. The Consul then gave directions for the release of the prisoner, and provided him with funds to reach the West. Before leaving he confessed his guilt in the presence of the Consul and others. It is therefore plain that the case is free from any mystery, except that in which the Press had enveloped it, and that the case clearly came within the Extradition Treaty between the United States and Prussia, under which the fugitive could have been delivered up had the North German Government so desired. Yours obediently,

KAPP, GOEPP & BURKE, of Counsel for the North German Consul-General.

NEW-YORK, March 1.

GRIFFITH GAUNT.

Proceedings in the Action for Libel by Charles Reade Against the "Round Table"—Reading of Griffith Gaunt in Court.

The trial of the action of libel brought by the celebrated English author, CHARLES READE, against the Round Table for malicious criticism of Griffith Gaunt, was resumed yesterday in the Supreme Court before Judge CLERKE. The Court-room was densely crowded in anticipation of the continuation of the reading of the novel by VANDENHOFF.

On the opening of the Court, Judge CLERKE, referring to the objection raised by defendant's counsel, that the reading of Griffith Gaunt ought not to be permitted until CHARLES READE'S authorship of the book was proved, added: The defendants' motion is inconsistent with their answer, which justifies the libel in force, is denied.

The plaintiff's counsel then stated to the Court that Mr. VANDENHOFF was unavoidably called away to fulfil an engagement at Catskill. They had, however, secured the services of Prof. FROBISHER, who would proceed with the reading of the book to the jury. They then called

JOSEPH E. FROBISHER, Professor of Rhetoric in the College of New-York, who proceeded with the reading of Griffith Gaunt to the jury.

At a few minutes after 12 o'clock, when the reader had reached Chap. XX. of this remarkable novel, his Honor announced that the Court would take a recess for ten minutes.

On the reassembling of the Court

Judge CLERKE said: I took the recess which has just expired because I wished to have a consultation with my brother Judges in relation to the reading of this book. I think we have been proceeding erroneously. This book ought not to be read by the plaintiff. The defendants have pleaded a justification of the libel, and it is for them to prove that justification by referring to those parts of the book which they believe bears out their views. It is evident that the affirmation will be made, and not with the plaintiff.

Mr. Whitney—If your Honor please, in answer to your remarks, I beg leave to state that the course we have taken is justified by precedent. The case was tried in the Home Circuit in 1865, Grace vs. Turnips, which is very analogous to this one. It was an action for libel brought by the author of the Old Ledger against the proprietors of the Athenæum. They said that it was only the worst novel ever published, but that it was full of flagrant indecency, and of abuse of both the living and the dead. The defendants pleaded "not guilty." After the trial had commenced and one on Mr. Justice EARLE said the book ought to have been put in by the plaintiff; as it was a question judging of its character. This is really the means of the entire case. If the new trial was granted the plaintiff would be compelled to do at the end. The defendants must take one of two courses: If they undertake to read specific passages, we have a right to object that they cannot single out specific passages, but they must judge of the spirit of the work, and its effect as a whole. There is hardly any book ever written that does not contain certain passages which, isolated, might be called objectionable, or even obscene. We, therefore, the defendants, put in those passages, we are compelled to put in the entire novel, and show that the general tone of the book is moral.

Mr. Whitney—I object to this evidence. To show that there is nothing whatever in the book to warrant such a tone of criticism. Thus, if somebody selected certain passages from the Bible or any remarks of Washington Irving, and thence proceeded to pass a criticism upon the entire works and charge them with impurity or obscenity, we should have to read the books themselves to show their general character. The opinion of the jury must be on the entire work, and not on any passage or chapter.

Mr Whitney—It is my wish, your Honor, to be understood as leaving the matter in your hands. There are parts of the book that we do not object to; but we will say that the question is one of fair criticism on the part of the defendants. They occupy a position that is privileged. They are justified in using strong language in this case.

His Honor—There is no doubt that the matter on the complaint is libelous per se. But of course if you can justify the defendants on the ground that the statements are true, and founded on the general tendency of the novel, you are entitled to a verdict. I think I will adhere to the opinion I have expressed that the book must not be read now.

Mr. Gerry—Well of course we bow to your Honor's opinion. Still, I would be glad if your Honor would note the chapter at which we left off reading.

Prof. Frobisher—It is chapter 20.

The plaintiff's counsel then proceeded with the examination of witness:

Richard H. Roade deposed as follows: I am by profession a journalist; I have been connected with the New-York Tribune during the past twelve years; I am an associate editor; I have been personally acquainted with Mr. Charles Reade between six and seven years; I saw him in the Summer of 1866 at his house in London; I resided at his house some five or six months—from the end of May, I think, to some time in October; I knew what literary work he was then engaged on; he was writing Griffith Gaunt.

Mr. Whitney—I object to this evidence. The question is not whether Mr. Charles Reade did or did not write the language contained in this book; but the question is whether he used the labors of other men and took his plot from some other man's book, which this witness is not competent to testify to. Nobody but Reade himself is competent to give evidence on this question of authorship of the novel.

Mr. Gerry—I differ with you. I think the evidence is worth.

His Honor—I think the evidence is admissible. The evidence may show how he prepared the materials of the work and sent the manuscript to the printer. It is no consideration for us how he originally obtained original productions of his own brain.

Mr. Whitney—We have another objection: The witness did not go to Mr. Reade's house until the larger portion of the work was published.

Mr. Gerry—At the time you were visiting Mr. Reade's house what literary productions was he engaged in writing?

Witness—I know of one or two; I know specially of the novel Griffith Gaunt, I saw him write portions of it, and I saw what was done with the manuscript; the manuscript was called for by Mr. Saunders, author's copyist; it was copied by him and then returned to Mr. Reade, who went over the manuscript again; it was then sent to the printer's; in some cases by myself and sometimes by others; I saw all the proofs while I was there; I cannot tell who the printer was; it was a printer in Blackfriars; I am acquainted with the firm of Ticknor & Fields in Boston.

Counsel—Do you know how much a page they paid for Griffith Gaunt?

Mr. Whitney—I object to that. There is no question as to the arrangement made with Ticknor & Fields; there is no allegation of special damages, and therefore the question of what the compensation was cannot be gone into.

His Honor—I think it is admissible to show the arrangement, as bearing upon the question of general damages.

Witness—It was either three pounds or three guineas a page of the Atlantic Monthly; that is about twenty dollars in currency.

Counsel—You have been in Court during the time the libel has been read by me?

Witness—During part of the time.

Counsel—Well, you have read those articles in the Round Table?

Witness—Yes.

Counsel—Well, during the time you were in England and staying at Mr. Charles Reade's house, did you read those articles, or any portion of them, in the local papers?

Mr. WHITNEY objected, on the ground that there was no allegation of any actual damage to Mr. READE; but the objection was overruled.

His Honor remarking that in cases of slander a special allegation was not necessary, because the law presumes there is a damage. But the rule of pleading still holds good—that if any special damage has been incurred it is proper to exhibit it in evidence.

Witness—There was a part of these articles copied into the London Review.

Mr. Sewell—We cannot help that. We are not responsible for what was published in England.

Mr. Whitney—I beg your pardon. The rule of common law holds good here that if a man does a wrong act he is responsible for all the consequences.

Mr. Sewell—Well, I think you cannot prove this unless you produce the papers.

His Honor—Oh, I think the evidence of the witness is admissible.

Witness—I saw portions of those articles in the London Review and the Globe; they had a notice at the head intimating that they were copied from the Round Table. The circulation of those papers is quite extensive among literary men, of whom Reade is one; after the articles had so appeared, apologies were afterwards inserted in those papers, stating that when the editors had examined those books they found that the criticisms were false and malicious, and that they had been betrayed into copying them by the supposed literary reputation of the Round Table; I cannot state the precise circulation of the London Review, or of any other paper; it is a paper holding a very high position; the Globe also is recognized as a literary and club organ; it is an evening paper.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sewell—I had not any business or literary relations with Mr. Reade; I was at his house as a guest; I was not engaged in the newspaper business in London; I have no actual knowledge of the circulation of those two papers; in regard to a weekly paper, twelve or fifteen thousand would be considered an extensive circulation; but I could not swear about the circulation of the Review; I judge that its circulation was extensive from the number of its advertisements; I have been on the Tribune twelve years; of course I was on it before I went to live with Mr. Reade; I would not like to swear even about the circulation of the Tribune; I did not act as literary agent to Mr. Reade in New-York City; I but acted as Charles Reade's agent to carry a play of his to a certain manager, and leave it with him; I did so; the play was produced at Wallack's; it was the first of "Never too Late to Mend;" I do not know exactly the circulation of the novel Griffith Gaunt; my impression is that when I went to his house he had finished the third instalment; it was written from time to time; it appeared monthly in the Argosy; Mr. Reade's age is about 56; he has been an author about fifteen or twenty years; I know that Mr. Reade was associated with other authors in the production of one or two of his works; in writing Peg Woffington he was associated with Tom Taylor; in Foul Play with Dion Boucicault.

By Mr. Gerry—I do not know that some chapters of a book called Foul Play, written by Mr. Reade and Mr. Boucicault, were sent back because Mr. Reade had not written them.

Counsel—How large is the circulation of the Tribune? Is it a hundred thousand?

Witness—The entire edition is 250,000, that is including the weekly edition.

Counsel—Can you give the jury any idea what is the circulation of those papers, the London Review and Globe?

Witness—I should suppose the London Review is about one-sixth of the Tribune; I think the Globe is about one-sixth or one-eighth of the Daily Tribune.

Counsel—Well, what is the circulation of the Daily Tribune?

Witness—Why, I mentioned it before.

Counsel—No; that was the Weekly Tribune. What do you estimate the circulation of the Daily?

Witness—I cannot tell; it varies very much; I should say it averages now about 60,000; Reade has written some twelve novels; three editions of Griffith Gaunt have been published in this country; each edition was, I suppose, about 25,000 copies; I do not know whether Charles Reade has received less remuneration since the appearance of these articles in the Round Table; I have no means of knowing.

The further hearing of the case was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Gas Nuisance—The Murray Hill Slaughter Houses—Election of President.

The Metropolitan Board of Health met yesterday afternoon, President G. B. LINCOLN occupying the chair.

Col. BLISS, counsel for the Board, reported that the examination of the complaint against the Metropolitan Gas Company, before a referee, had been concluded, and that he was ready to present the testimony.

Counsel for the Company asked a postponement for two weeks, owing to the fact that he was unprepared at present to argue the case.

Considerable discussion ensued upon the motion, during which the Commissioners manifested much feeling against the Company. Commissioner STONE said that that corporation had promised eight months ago to remedy this matter, and had failed to do so, and he, for one, would not allow another day's postponement, unless the Company could show that it was honestly endeavoring to abate this nuisance.

Counsel for the Company said that his clients were doing all that could be done to remedy the matter, and assured the Board that they were not trifling with it in the least.

It was finally decided that the further consideration of this matter should be postponed until Thursday afternoon, at 1 o'clock.

The complaints of residents of Murray Hill against the slaughter-houses in that locality were renewed by Mr. CHAUNCEY SHAFFER and others of the aggrieved, who spoke at length upon the subject. A letter was read, also, from the Pastor of St. Benedict (R. C.) Church, corner of Forty-seventh-street and Second-avenue, indorsing the complaint and joining in the protest against the perpetuity of the alleged nuisances. Owing to the absence of Judge CULVER, who was to have appeared for the respondents, the matter was postponed for one week.

On motion of Commissioner MANNIERE, it was resolved that hereafter, persons applying for permits to erect and maintain slaughter-houses in the City, shall give public notice of their intention so to do by advertising in three morning newspapers, twice a week for two weeks.

The attorney was directed to draft an ordinance which would specifically authorize the Board of Health to take action in the case of dogs which have bitten persons, or of dogs which have been bitten by those who were mad, as no such ordinance exists at present.

Six lodging-cellars were reported to be in an untenable condition, and were, therefore, ordered to be vacated and improved.

The Board then entered upon an election for President for the ensuing term, and after two ballots had been taken, Commissioner GEORGE B. LINCOLN was declared elected.

The Board then adjourned until Thursday afternoon.

Fatal Railroad Accidents.

Yesterday morning a child four years of age, named JOHN MULLIGAN, residing with its parents at No. 213 Sullivan-street, when with his mother in Sullivan-street, near Amity, ran into the street after an apple which had fallen from his hand. Car No. 109, of the Seventh-avenue line, was approaching at the moment, and before the driver could check his horses one of the animals struck the child on the head with its hoof and inflicted a wound from which the boy died within a few minutes. The driver was arrested and is held to await the result of an inquest which will be held by Coroner SCHIRMER this morning.

JOHN SULLIVAN, aged 26 years, died yesterday at Mount Sinai Hospital from injuries received on the 15th ult. by being run over by car No. 106, of the Seventh-avenue line. SULLIVAN was at the time of the accident partially intoxicated, and was stancing on the step of the front platform when he fell under the wheels of the car. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest in the case, and a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

Nursery and Child's Hospital—The Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the officers and patrons of this institution was held yesterday in the building corner of Fifty-first-street and Lexington-avenue. A large number of ladies were present.

Rev. Dr. RYER presided. After prayer by Rev. Mr. TURNER, the fifteenth annual report of the Secretary was submitted. It stated that the institution was at present free from debt, in consequence of the legacy of $10,000, left by the late Mr. GARNER, a portion of which had been expended, and the balance funded. There were admitted during the year, from March 1, 1868, to March 1, 1869, children, 399; born in the institution, 67; remaining in March, 1868, 208; total, 674. Adults—women with children, 171; for confinement, 74; adults remaining in March, 1868, 103; total, 348. Cared for—Children, 674; adults, 348; totally, 1,022. Remaining in the institute at the present time, 213 children and 102 adults; total, 315.

The Treasurer's report showed the receipts for the year to be $92,640 95, including legacy of Mr. GARNER, $9,400; of G. GOGGILL, $295; Charity Ball of 1868, $12,103 36; Charity Ball of 1869, 845.50. The expenses for the year were $86,726 98. Balance on hand, $5,104 57. The report of the Medical Board was then read by the Secretary, showing that during the past year there have been under treatment 1,030 patients, exclusive of many cases of slight ailments common to infancy. Of these 798 have recovered, 54 remain under treatment, and 178 have died. The most prevalent diseases have been those of the respiratory organs, and of the alimentary canal. There have been twelve cases of scarlet fever and eleven of diptheria—two of each proving fatal—and considerable whooping cough and tarcella, but no measles.

After the reading of the reports the children were introduced, and after some interesting exercises they were addressed in a simple and touching style by Rev. Mr. RYER. He then addressed a few complimentary remarks to the officers and manageresses, and congratulated them on the gratifying nature of the reports.

The following officers and manageresses were then elected for the ensuing year:

Mrs. Du Bois, First Directress; Mrs. Doremus, Second Directress; Mrs. Anthon, Third Directress; Mrs. Susan T. Barney, Secretary; Mrs. Stoughton, Treasurer; Mesdames Averill, Appleton, Abecasis, Brooks, Barlow, Barker, Bleecker, Clarke, Cooper, Coleman, Fargo, Jandon, Kingsland, Locke, Macy, McCormick, Shelton, Sullivan, Thompson, Viele, Walker, Wallack, Ward, Martin, Roosevelt, Hoey, Craven, Garner, Van Rensselaer, Knower, McKinley, Lemis, and Miss Hunter, Manageresses.

The children sang the Doxology, Rev. Mr. TURNER pronounced the benediction, and the meeting adjourned.

The German Republican on Naturalization.

The German Republican General Committee, (formerly Grant and Colfax Campaign Club,) President SIGISMUND KAUFMANN, has sent the following memorial to Congress:

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States:

The German Republican General Committee of the City and County of New York, formerly the Grant and Colfax Campaign Club, respectfully represents:

That we hereby approve of the efforts now being made by Congress to amend the Naturalization laws with the view of preventing frauds and to protect the purity of the ballot-box. We consider that a provision to be inserted in said laws transferring the right to naturalize foreigners from the State Courts into the hands of the Federal Courts, would be most effective for that purpose. We have full confidence that Congress, by amending these laws as necessity requires, will faithfully preserve those liberal principles upon which the progress and grandeur of our Republic depend. In order to prevent or to remove wrong impressions we would further respectfully represent that a certain memorial embodying views different from those above set forth, which has recently been presented to Congress, signed by a German Republican Central Committee of the City of New-York, jointly with the German Democratic Central Committee of said City, does not express the genuine opinion of the German Republicans of this City.

That the body calling itself German Republican Central Committee has long since ceased to act in full harmony with the Republican Party; that it oscillated politically between the two parties, between the two factions more than two years, between the two great political camps, and that it follows in this question, as it has done in various other questions, in the wake of the Democratic party.

SIGISMUND KAUFMANN, President German Committee; HENRY MERZ, First Vice-President; CHRISTOPH BOMMER, Second Vice-President; ADOLPH SCHREIBER, Treasurer; BENJAMIN LEHMAIER, Treasurer; CHAS. WIRTH, Recording Secretary; PAUL SCHNITZLER, Corresponding Secretary; J. FENSTERER, Financial Secretary; Executive Committee.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 27, 1869.

Pardon of a Counterfeiter.

NATHANIEL OAKLEY, who was sentenced for three years to the Albany Penitentiary in July of 1867, for counterfeiting, has been pardoned by the President, on the recommendation of SAMUEL COURTNEY, JOHN T. HOFFMAN, JOHN MORRISSEY, PETER B. SWEENEY and WILLIAM M. TWEED.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Advices have been received by the English War Office to the effect that the British troops had made reprisals on the natives of New-Zealand in retaliation for recent outrages. The Prussian Diet had agreed to grant the sum of 2,000,000 florins to the City of Frankfort-on-the-Main. The death of DE LAMARTINE, the French poet and historian, occurred yesterday at Paris.

WEST INDIES AND MEXICO.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Cleopata, we are in receipt of late mail news from the West Indies and Mexico. Our Cuba letter is dated Feb. 23, and gives particulars of the action of Gen. DULCE in regard to the expiration of the term of amnesty, and interesting facts concerning the progress of the insurrection. Our correspondent further informs us that local disturbances were apprehended in consequence of ill feeling between the volunteer and the regular troops guarding the City of Havana, and refers to a plot planned, it is alleged, with a view to securing the supersedure of DULCE by a more popular chief. The news from Hayti has been anticipated. St. Domingo advices report that Republic in an unsettled condition. Pronunciamientos were being made everywhere. The Southeastern Province of Seybo was in open rebellion and troops had been dispatched thither to oppose the advance of the enemy. No definite news had reached St. Domingo as to the result of this move. The Northwestern districts were maintaining a guerrilla warfare against the Government forces. The Southwest Province of Azua was still revolutionized. The town of Azua was, at last accounts, threatened by the revolutionists, and once the latter holds that seaport, the road to St. Domingo City is understood to be open to them. City of Mexico dates are to Feb. 13. They embody details of disturbances at Puebla and mention a few out of a score of pronunciamientos that had latterly been made in different parts of the Republic.

Telegraphic advices from Havana state that the Government troops under Gen. PUELLO had met the insurgents near Cifuentes and defeated them. Three hundred rebels had surrendered at Villa Clara. Gen. LESCA was advancing into the interior without much opposition. Four Spanish gunboats and the man-of-war Guadiana were reported off the coast.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the Committee on Finance were relieved from consideration of the bill on coinage of five-cent pieces. After reports had been made by committees on sundry bills, an animated discussion ensued on the bill to provide for the removal of political disabilities. The name of ASA ROGERS, of Virginia, was mentioned on a motion to strike him from the list, though nothing decisive ensued owing to the expiration of the morning hour. The correspondence between the State Department and the United States Minister at Madrid, was, on motion by Mr. CONKLING, called for. The amendment of Mr. SPRAGUE to the Army Appropriation, was then considered, which led to the presentation of several other amendments, including the claim set up by Massachusetts for advancements made during the war of 1812, upon which a protracted debate was had. In the evening session Mr. PATTERSON continued his speech on the Army Appropriation bill, and advocated the amendment offered by Mr. SUMNER; after which the Senate adjourned, at 11:40 P. M.

In the House a large number of bills were, on the call of the States, read twice and referred to appropriate committees. Considerable debate occurred on the proposition to return to Gen. ROBT. E. LEE sundry relics of WASHINGTON, and the intended movement was stopped by resolution. A long list of miscellaneous appropriations were then considered, and confirmed in nearly every instance. An hour of the evening session was occupied by the Committee of the Whole on invalid pensions. A personal discussion occurred between Messrs. SCHENCK and BUTLER about a question of privilege on the Public Credit bill. Appropriations were made for the Bangor Custom-house, and public buildings in Knoxville, as well as for certain Territorial surveys.

GENERAL.

Great difficulty has been experienced by the Court in Richmond in finding an unprejudiced jury for the trial of JAMES GRANT for the murder of H. RIVES POLLARD. A large number of talesmen were finally brought from Alexandria and Norfolk, and on Saturday the panel was completed. The trial is now in progress.

Municipal officers are to be elected to-day in the following cities of this State: Rochester, Oswego, Utica, Auburn, Elmira, Troy and Newburg. Great interest is felt in each of these localities as to the result of the canvass.

Eleven blood horses, formerly owned by the late JOHN MINOR BOTTS, were sold on the 17th inst. Engineer, a stallion 17 years old, brought $700, which was the largest sum obtained for any single horse. Some of the animals had quite lengthy pedigrees, but none had become famous.

Advices from the West state that the Union Pacific Railroad is not yet open, owing to recent snow-storms, and it is impossible to say when the mails will get through. They are, however, promptly delivered at the end of the Union Pacific Road, and the difficulty is on this side.

Revenue Assessor JOHN W. FRAZIER, of the First District of Pennsylvania, has been suspended by the newly-appointed Supervisor for neglect of duty. It is understood that Assessor FRAZIER refuses to recognize the authority of the Supervisor, and has sent him a letter to that effect, and that he intends to continue to perform the duties of his office.

It has been stated that several States have already ratified through the action of their Legislatures, the Suffrage Amendment to the Constitution. There is a specified form to be gone through with before the amendment could legally be acted upon by any State, and in the instances cited could not have been complied with. An official copy must be transmitted by the President to the Governor of each State, and by him laid before the Legislature.

A Washington correspondent says that both Republicans and Democrats have agreed by common consent to pay THEODORE M. POMEROY, of New-York, the compliment of election as Speaker by acclamation, to serve twenty-four hours after Speaker COLFAX resigns.

Mr. CHOATE, the alleged Newburyport incendiary, was yesterday indicted on seventeen separate charges of arson. He plead not guilty. The trial will take place next week.

The Metropolitan Board of Health met yesterday afternoon. The hearing in the case of the Board against the Metropolitan Gas Company was deferred until Thursday, and that of the residents of Murray Hill against the slaughter houses of that locality until Monday next. Mr. GEO. B. LINCOLN was reelected President of the Board for the ensuing term, and an adjournment for one week was finally ordered.

The Board of Excise met yesterday, and granted twenty-nine new licenses. Seven complaints against liquor-dealers for infringement of the law were disposed of. Only one license was revoked, and the Board adjourned for one week.

The Sixty-second Annual Commencement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons took place last evening at Steinway Hall. There were eighty-seven graduates.

The general markets were quiet, as a rule, yesterday. Cotton, Flour, Wheat, Whisky, Pork and Lard were cheaper. Corn was dearer. Sugars were less buoyant. Freights dull and drooping.

Transactions at the Live Stock Markets yesterday were unusually active. Prices of beef cattle were more firm and ½c.@1c. ₱ lb. higher than they were reported one week ago. Prime bullocks found a ready sale at 16½c.@17c. ₱ lb., net weight. The demand for smooth and thrifty steers is excellent. Fair to good bullocks will sell for 15c.@16c. ₱ lb. Trade in sheep is also active, and prices are well maintained at 6c.@8c. ₱ lb., live weight, for good to prime mutton sheep. Inferior droves are sold at intermediate prices, between 4c.@6c. ₱ lb. A few prime sheep brought over 8c. ₱ lb. There is more activity in the swine market than usual. Trade is fair at 14c.@14½c. ₱ lb., for City dressed, with occasional sales at 14½c. ₱ lb. Western dressed ½c.@1c. ₱ lb. less. Live hogs are so seldom sold that it is difficult to ascertain what the market price really is.

Gen. Grant and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Gen. GRANT is reported as saying to Mr. DELANO that if he could judiciously do so he would gladly give him a place in his Cabinet, but the position of Commissioner of Internal Revenue he regarded as among the most important offices in his gift—fully equal to a Cabinet position.

If Gen. GRANT be correctly reported, it is manifest that he fully understands the great importance of this office to his Administration. His conversation, together with the fact that the announcement of this appointment preceeds that of the Secretary of the Treasury, and must have been determined on without consultation with the person who is to fill that office, shows that under the next Administration the Commissioner, although nominally a subordinate of the Treasury Department, is, in fact, to be the responsible head of the Revenue Bureau. This is as it should be. Mr. ROLLINS was never more than the nominal head of that bureau, always liable to be overruled by the Secretary, and not infrequently by a mere clerk in the Secretary's office. We believe it is true that although Mr. ROLLINS has held the office for nearly four years, no assessor or collector was ever appointed on his recommendation, while for the last two years the Secretary has hardly gone through the form of consulting him upon the minor appointments of the Department. Such a course is destructive of all discipline and of all efficiency. No subordinate cared for the Commissioner, and they obeyed or disobeyed his directions just as it suited their pleasure. All understood that to quarrel with him was to gain the active support of the President. The Commissioner found himself at the head of a bureau, the subordinates of which he could neither appoint nor remove, and whose official action even he was unable to direct.

Mr. ROLLINS' administration has not been a success, but no one can truly affirm that he is responsible for the failure. Opposed as he has been almost from the start by the President, with the whole force of the Administration, and particularly its thieves, which certainly have constituted its most active if not its most numerous class of adherents, arrayed against him, success was never possible. A man with a different temperament from that of Mr. ROLLINS might have attempted more, but his failure would have been equally certain and perhaps even more disastrous. Dissension and weakness at Washington have been the bane of the revenue service, and the primary cause of its complete demoralization.

But under the incoming Administration all this will be changed. Gen. GRANT understands, as only military men can understand, the moral power of discipline. He knows that to be useful his Commissioner must be respected, and to be respected he must be the actual head of his Department. He must have power—sole and absolute power and control over his own subordinates. The President elect will never hold the head of a department responsible for the conduct of subordinates he did not appoint, and whose removal from office he is powerless to effect. We expect, therefore, that entire control of the revenue service will be accorded to the Commissioner, and for that branch of the Treasury Department he will be held responsible.

Thus administered the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue is one of the most important offices within the gift of the President elect, not surpassed in consequence by any in the Government.

In giving the Revenue Bureau a responsible head Gen. GRANT will have taken the first step requisite to a successful enforcement of the Revenue law; but even with a united Executive Government at Washington, success will not be attained without an effort.

He who supposes that all whisky rings are to expire with the present Administration, and that no bad men are to seek and obtain office under the next, has but little knowledge of the wide-spread demoralization which exists when it is only a question of cheating the Government. Many bad men will obtain office. Many who enter office with entirely honest purposes will be corrupted afterward, for human nature will not change with the change of Administration, and the temptation to cheat will be as great as ever.

But before a Commissioner can suppress fraud he must be able to establish the fact of its existence. Specific allegations of fraud must be supported by specific proof. How is the Commissioner in Washington to obtain the knowledge, first, that fraud exists, and second, the proof by which its existence may be established? This at best is extremely difficult for him to do, and under the present law we deem it well-nigh impossible. Of course the matter would be greatly simplified if the local officers would do their duty. But the greater proportion of the local officers in the great centres of revenue collection will not do their duty. These never have and never will; and under the present law it is not within the power of the Commissioner to compel them to do it. The difficulty is for the Commissioner to know what particular officer is violating his duty. Take the case of a distillery in New-York, that accounts regularly for 85 per cent. of its assessed capacity. Now how is the Commissioner to know whether the distiller actually produces 85 or 125 per cent. of the estimated capacity of his distillery? Under the present law it is all in the hands of the local officers, and they are a close corporation. The law proceeds upon the theory that the mere declaration that the local officer is to be held to a strict responsibility for the frauds committed in his district is sufficient to secure his vigilance and fidelity, and leaves the Commissioner no means but the impossible one of personal supervision, of tracing the vague and shapeless charge of fraud to the particular district where it has been committed.

Local officers should undoubtedly be held responsible for frauds in their respective districts, but human nature will have to undergo a radical change before men are found willing to convict themselves, either of collusion or incompetency, by reporting the existence of corruption in their own districts so long as the law affords them the means of settling and covering up matters that should be subjected to the widest and most searching investigation.

Hence it is a mere mockery to talk of holding them responsible without giving to the Commissioner power, through a numerous and trusted staff acting directly under his orders, and in conjunction with the Supervisors, of ascertaining whether the law is enforced, and if not, of fixing the responsibility for the failure upon the proper officer. As the law now stands, the Commissioner has no means of ascertaining whether the law is enforced in any particular district other than those that are open to every citizen. We have no doubt Commissioner DELANO will very soon discover this defect in the present law and ask for its amendment.

Another and more serious difficulty, which the Commissioner will encounter in his efforts at reform, arises from the fact that the officers upon whom he must rely for the punishment of fraud do not belong to his Department, and are not under his control. Nothing can be done in the way of enforcing this law except with the aid and coöperation of the District-Attorneys. The Department must rely upon the Courts for the enforcement of the law, and the faithful collection of the revenues will depend more upon a half dozen appointments to be made by the Attorney-General than upon any other dozen appointments to be made in the Revenue Service proper.

With the right men for District-Attorneys in New-York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis and New-Orleans, the Revenue laws can be enforced, and the taxes on whisky and tobacco collected. With a majority of these places filled with corrupt or inefficient men, success will be greatly imperilled if not entirely defeated.

Knowing the conscientious efforts that the President elect has made to inform himself thoroughly upon the workings of the Revenue Service, we are sure that he will at once recognize—if he has not already done so—the vital necessity of so filling all the offices that have any direct bearing on the collection of the internal tax as to secure a harmonious coöperation of the various officers of the Government, in the interests of energy, honesty and the conviction and punishment of the wretches who have for four years robbed the country under every pretext that a crafty and criminal imagination could invent.

Count Bismarck and Napoleon—The Prospects of Peace in Europe.

The war-clouds seem once more to be gathering in Europe. With the approach of the campaigning season, Herr VON BISMARCK has resumed his position as the foremost man in North Germany—trusted at Berlin, supreme in the Chambers, and more impatient than ever of either opposition to his designs or delay in their execution. His language with regard to the recalcitrant North German Princes who refuse to accept their situation was at once contemptuous and ferocious in a degree hitherto almost unparalleled, even at Berlin. In advocating the sequestration of the private property of the King of Hanover and the Elector of Hesse Cassel, he defended the system of espionage by which their designs against the Government had been brought to light, and spoke of the necessity of "pursuing those reptiles into their holes"—i. e., following them up by means of spies in the countries where they are sheltered, in order "to see what they are about." "Reptiles" is a strong word when applied to Ex-Sovereigns whose only offence is that they clung as long as they could to "rights" at least as "divine" as those of the House of Hohenzollern, and now waste their time on ineffectual protests, and their money on a "Hanoverian Legion," which may figure on paper as a magnificent body of uniformed and decorated chivalry, but which cannot possibly afford Prussia any serious disquietude. And in taunting his old opponent, Herr VIRCHOW, with his unwillingness to recognize danger in the attitude of France, he used the following words:

"I am in danger, I say, of being told that I am a prophet of evil, and that I am constantly speaking of a dagger being directed against our breast which that honorable gentleman cannot see. It is my comfort that there was a time when that honorable gentleman could not see hundreds of thousands of bayonets which were clear enough to the eyes of everybody else. The sleepy chamberlain of King Duncan did not see the dagger in the hands of Macbeth; but it is the duty of those who have to watch over the interests of a great nation to keep awake and watchful. I say peace seemed to be threatened; and I may add that it was threatened through a misunderstanding. The danger of the situation has decreased since the Ministry of the Danubian Principalities was changed, and other events have drawn attention in other directions."

"The danger of the situation has decreased," but the mode of stating the fact does not tend to calm Germany, conciliate France or reassure Europe. In fact, critics of an alarmist tendency of mind might not unreasonably draw the conclusion that the precise reverse of all these effects was intended. Certain it is that the German Press is excited, and the French Press driven into frenzy by the last quoted speech, which, to the latter at least, reads like a veiled defiance. There are rumors too of signs once more of warlike agitation in Roumania, which under Prince CHARLES of Hohenzollern is widely regarded in Southeastern Europe as a crater through which voleanic agencies emanating from Berlin may at any time be manifested.

Taken together, it is impossible to disregard the dangerous aspect of these recent signs of the times. Although last year passed over, after all, without an outbreak, nothing occurred that can fairly be said to have brought a permanent pacification nearer to hand. On the other side of the question it may be argued that the very imminence of the crisis last year, and the rapidity with which the public alarm subsided after pacific assurances had once been exchanged, may be regarded as good reasons for hoping that the dangers to the peace of Europe which are now threatened may be dispelled in the same way. We still refuse to believe that either the Emperor NAPOLEON or the Prussian people desire war—the cautious anxiety for the security of his dynasty of the one, and the patient confidence in their own future of the other, tend to forbid the supposition. The danger, we fear, lies in the arrogance of Count BISMARCK and the impulsive sensitiveness of the French people. On one side a pacific ruler and a proud and warlike people; on the other an ambitious and imperious statesman flushed with success and brutal with consciousness of power, and an equally proud, though less impetuous people—such we fancy are the elements of the situation. For the sake of the peace and prosperity of Europe generally, it is to be hoped that the statesmanship of NAPOLEON, and the self-restraint of the German people may avert the threatened danger.

Senator Sherman and Mr. Hooper's Bill.

The reputable portion of the financial community has protested with great unanimity against the Treasury practice of selling gold secretly, and negotiating the sale of bonds, through the intervention of brokers, at the cost of heavy commissions. Bankers and business men in all the leading cities have entreated Congress to take from the Treasury the power of playing into the hands of favored speculators by secret issues of bonds and secret sales of gold. They have asked that the authority under which the amount of gold interest-bearing bonds has been largely and unwisely increased shall be restrained—that the Treasury, when it has gold to sell, shall sell it openly—and that its officers shall themselves perform the service for which others have been largely paid. These amendments have been urged as well to promote economy and improve the public credit as to prevent the recurrence of transactions which have brought disgrace upon Treasury management.

All these points are covered by Mr. HOOPER'S bill, which the House promptly passed on the 13th February. It may not be absolutely necessary to avert under Gen. GRANT the mismanagement which has too often characterized the Treasury under the present Administration; but it gives the form and force of law to a policy which has the approval of sound financiers throughout the country, and tends most surely to improve the national credit.

This measure, valuable as are its provisions, and strong as is its indorsement by the public, lingers in the Senate Committee. Mr. SHERMAN might any day report it and enable the Senate to pass judgment on its merits, but he allows it to sleep. It is, of course, unpalatable to him personally. It demolishes his pet crotchet, and plays havoc with the speculative interests and the Treasury practices which he is willing to perpetuate. These are reasons why he should vote against and speak against it in the Senate, but they furnish no excuse for his attempt to kill it in committee. It is altogether too important to be sacrificed at the bidding of those who profit by the present system, or to enable Mr. SHERMAN to air hobbies for which the country has no liking.

Departmental Responsibility—The Condition of its Exercise.

The remarks attributed to Gen. GRANT with all the appearance of truth, in regard to minor appointments, indicate the clearness of vision and the integrity of purpose which will govern the practical details of his administration. As a soldier, he learned the necessity of associating power with responsibility and duty with the conditions essential to its efficient exercise. As President, he intends to introduce the same principle into the management of the Departments. The head of each will be clothed with the authority requisite for the vigorous and faithful performance of its duties, and will be held accountable for the capacity and conduct of his subordinates.

One of the political misfortunes of late years has been the tendency of the President to take cognizance of all appointments. High or low, great or small, he has busied himself with them to an extent which must have been as vexatious personally as it has been injurious to the public service. Personal and partisan considerations have been paramount. There have been friends to save and enemies to punish, and with these objects to be fulfilled, the real needs of the Departments have been overlooked. In this manner, the system which has demoralized our politics, and degraded and impaired our civil service, has reached its climax. The time and energies of the President have been frittered away with the details of appointments and removals, of which the departmental chiefs are alone competent to judge.

This great scandal and most disastrous evil Gen. GRANT means as far as possible to end. He will not consent to be the dispenser of small patronage. He will not take cognizance of the paltry business of office-hunting or the petty particulars of the Departments. He will not give heed to the herd of impudent politicians, who on the plea of party service claim the right to control local appointments. It is not in his power, unfortunately, to purge this stain from our system of government; for that relief the country must rely upon civil service reform on the basis of Mr. JENCKES' bill or some similar measure. So far as he can, however, Gen. GRANT intends to turn the office-hunting stream from the White House, and to purify the manner of making appointments by leaving the heads of Departments to scrutinize applications and make the recommendations on which he will act.

A new element of responsibility will thus be secured. As matters now stand, only nominal responsibily exists anywhere. The Executive cannot possibly be competent to determine the fitness of individuals who are thrust upon him, nor can the Secretaries fairly be made accountable for the unworthiness of subordinates whom they appoint at his instance. One of the most valuable guarantees of general efficiency is in this way destroyed. The result we have in the corruption and incompetency of the civil service, and the conflict as to responsibility, which are among the disgraceful incidents of the day. The virtual transfer of the appointing business to the Cabinet officers will of itself be a wholesome change. It will make their selection of subordinates, from heads of Bureaus downward, a duty, the consequences of which they cannot hope to evade. They will have the power they should have to insure efficiency, and the public will know to whom censure belongs if the working of the Departments be not as it ought to be.

The theory on which Gen. GRANT'S action will rest is impregnable. It will make responsible authority a verity by concentrating it in hands best fitted to use it wisely, and will enable the President to gather about him as advisers a higher order of men than is always possible when Cabinet officers amount to nothing more than Executive clerks. In their relation to him, they will be masters of the personnel of the Departments whose affairs they respectively administer.

The complete efficacy of the reform, however, is in a large degree contingent upon the doings of the Senate. The law which cripples the President and strengthens the knaves' tenure of office will equally obstruct the path of the Secretary who would purify his Department. Mere clerks he may dismiss at pleasure; but the higher grade of subordinates whose misconduct brings odium upon the Government, are fortified in their positions by the pride and obstinacy of the Senate. If the rascalities now complained of be not abated, and the officials compromised be not removed, the country will know whom to blame. The House has done what it could to enable Gen. GRANT to carry out his ideas of efficiency and responsibility; the Senate takes the rascals into its keeping, in order that it may retain opportunities of thwarting him and his policy. The Senate, in short, has constituted itself the bulwark behind which untrustworthy officials may for a time mock the policy on which Gen. GRANT proposes to proceed, and nullify the doctrine of responsibility on which he desires to organize his Cabinet. Senators may equivocate and explain, but from this ugly fact there is no escape while the Tenure-of-Office acts remains upon the statute book.

The Mexican Troubles—Robbers, Not Rebels.

We are now told that while the late "uprisings" throughout Mexico, and especially through all the Pacific States, were not exaggerated in the former news, the motive of a part of them was at that time wrongly reported. Plunder, not politics, was, it appears, the moving spring in some of these demonstrations, and even the object of Gen. NEGRETE'S pronunciamiento at Puebla was to capture a train with $3,000,000 in gold, which was on the road from the City of Mexico for Vera Cruz.

This news the Mexican Government announces with great satisfaction for the benefit of mankind in general and of the United States in particular. NEGRETE'S movement "had no political purpose whatever." It is not rebels but robbers that haunt the highways and menace the mints, seizing a conducta here, a city there, and rendering travel and property-holding a peril throughout Mexico. It is only robbers—nothing more. Had there been insurrection in the Puebla stroke, the Government of JUAREZ would have been alarmed; but, as for mere brigandage—bah! people are used to that in the "sister Republic," and it is not worth thinking of.

The truth is, that three-fifths of Mexico is practically under the domination of organized gangs of robbers. NEGRETE'S capture of Puebla with 500 followers, and their dispersing on the approach of Government troops, is only an illustration on a larger scale of daily life and experience in Mexico. From the Indian bandit-chiefs in their rocky mountain fastnesses to NEGRETE in the streets of Puebla, the footpad is the pest and peril of society, and especially of travel. The Government may think it is fine to reflect that it is only robbery—not rebellion—that menaces the State; but the difference to the happiness and prosperity of the people is not striking.

There is one remarkable, and perhaps hopeful, item, however, in the last Mexican news. GUTIERREZ (who once commanded, we believe, the Fourth Division in the Mexican Army, and turned professional footpad and kidnapper, in order to make a better income,) was lately captured in Durango, where, at the head of his gang, he has been robbing right and left. "He attempted to make his escape," says the account, "by bribing his guard, offering them $64,000, but without effect." We confess that we are exceedingly incredulous about this story. It would certainly be a Mexican miracle, if true. If true, however, it is evidence of a brighter day for Mexico, and let us therefore hope that there may be some shadow of foundation in the strange story.

Judge Bedford's Charge.

In his charge to the Grand Jury, yesterday, at the opening of the March Term of the Court of General Sessions, City Judge BEDFORD took occasion to speak of some of the alarming phases which have recently characterized crime in this City, and asserted that a "standing battle now exists between the authorities and the violators of law." We are glad to have this assurance from his Honor, and trust that the vigor and determination which have marked the conduct of his colleague, Recorder HACKETT, and the prosecuting officers of the county, during the last month, in dealing with offenders, will not be intermitted until the dangerous classes have found out that their misdeeds are no longer to be committed with impunity. Let the penalty of crime always be prompt and sure, and the stigma which has been justly fastened upon the fair fame of the City by the daring outrages of unpunished thieves and ruffians will soon be removed.

Judge BEDFORD rather takes exception to the very general opinion that the recent course of our criminal Magistrates demonstrates that they are at last arousing to the necessity of vigilance and to the understanding of the responsibilities with which they are clothed. He argues that there never has been any laxity on the part of the Magistrates, and makes the unwillingness of citizens to serve as jurors the scape-goat of any shortcomings which have been connected with the administration of our criminal affairs.

We can only half agree with the conclusions of Judge BEDFORD in this respect. The selfishness and recusancy of jurors have had, indeed, much to do with the slow course of justice, but the partiality and remissness of officials have been far more detrimental to the public interests than the lack of zeal on the part of jurors. The faults of the latter are the outgrowth of an imperfect and unfair system; those of the officials can be directly traced to the influences of partisan politics.

In one point, however—perhaps the most important which the charge contains—we heartily concur with all that Judge BEDFORD says. He refers to the need of reforming the existing code of criminal procedure by stripping the laws of their "cumbrous and faulty formulas, which are entirely unsuited to the age." This done, there can be no doubt that the administration of justice would be simplified and facilitated; and we share Judge BEDFORD'S hopes that the present Legislature will adopt the new Code, which has been for many years prepared—framed by a commission of the most talented and experienced members of the Bar,—but the passage of which opposing influences have hitherto succeeded in defeating.

MINOR TOPICS.

Mr. SMITH (John) arrived in Washington yesterday, and soon afterward had an "interview" with Gen. GRANT. It is rumored that the business of Mr. SMITH was to obtain an invitation to accept a seat in Gen. GRANT'S Cabinet but SMITH himself is very reticent on the subject, and refuses to say whether he has concluded to accept the offer which he thinks GRANT may conclude to make. SMITH gave Gen. GRANT his "views" on the finances, which showed him to be well fitted for the Treasury Department; he also gave his views on our foreign relations, which indicated his remarkable adaptation to the Department of State; his views on army affairs, which agreed exactly with those attributed to GRANT, proved him properly qualified to be Secretary of War; and in like manner when he touched on Postal, Legal and Naval affairs, (on all of which he was desirous that GRANT should hear his "views;") he demonstrated his ability to fill the place of Postmaster-General, Attorney-General, or Secretary of the Navy. We ourselves are entirely in favor of the appointment of SMITH, but we are not yet prepared to say to what place.

Poor LAMARTINE has passed away at last. For years past, the mind of the great French sentimentalist—who was a poet by nature and a politician by accident—has suffered from a decay as lamentable as that which previously overtook his fortune, and we have heard nothing of him but occasional wails over his fate and appeals for relief. Though he failed as a statesman, it was at a time when failure was fate; and his genius as a writer will cause him to be mourned in France as BERANGER was mourned.

The language that has been used in this country against the Alabama Treaty with England, points, not to a different form of treaty, but directly to war; and on this question the Saturday Review (London) says:

"Yet it is incredible that any serious politician in the United States should complain, after years of negotiation ending in the concession of almost every American demand, an utterly unprovoked resort to arms. It is, indeed, by latent menaces that American diplomacy has succeeded in alarming the timid portion of the English community, including, perhaps, more than one statesman high in office; but there is a limit to the concessions which might be preferable to a rupture. If the treaty is not ratified, there ought to be no hurry in recommencing negotiations. After approaching to the verge of humiliation in its anxiety for justice and conciliation, the English Government has thrown upon the United States the responsibility of deliberately keeping the quarrel open. No great importance should be attached to the willful retention of a pretext for war. Grave as the evils of war would be, it would be better for England to face it at once than to submit to intolerable degradation. A war gratuitously commenced for the purpose of avenging on England the recognition of belligerency which was simultaneously accorded by France, and two or three weeks later by every European Power, including Russia, would be an outrage revolting to the moral sense of mankind; and ultimately it would not go unpunished."

Before rejecting the treaty, the Senate should indicate distinctly its grounds of dissatisfaction, and the new demands that are to be made upon England. The people should comprehend exactly where the Government stands, and the position it is prepared to take in regard to this long-outstanding question, which must some day in some way be settled.

Two months ago a gentleman named ROGERS was murdered at the door of his house in this City. For a while, a great noise was made about catching his murderers and executing summary justice in the case. Latterly, however, all interest in the matter seems to have died out, and the public are rapidly forgetting the occurrence in the rush of new events. Have the resources of the authorities actually been exhausted, and is the case to pass into the list of undetected murders.

Day after to-morrow, GRANT had better look out for his pocket-book, and COLFAX for his watch, and SHERMAN for his gold studs, and each member of Congress for his diamond ring, and everybody for any valuables they may have about their person. Large delegations of the most expert pickpockets have gone on to Washington to attend the inauguration, and some of them are sharp enough to steal a man's clothes from his back. Their harvest will, of course, be reaped from rural visitors, but everybody had better be on the lookout.

The Customs revenue of the Government at this port during the last week reached nearly three-fourths of a million a day; and for all February showed an increase of nearly two and a half millions, as compared with February of last year. Washington dispatches report the aggregate coin reserve of the Treasury Department at ninety-eight millions, and the currency balance at about thirteen and a half millions. At the close of January the coin reserve was eighty-eight and three-fourths millions, and the currency balance seventeen and a half millions. The coin and currency balances of the United States Sub-Treasury on Saturday were $88,540,000, against $83,670,000 at the end of January.

New-York has something to learn from her young sister metropolis, Cleveland, which has been just setting up one of the readiest, cheapest and most popular institutions of science and literature. Cleveland has set up a free library, under one of the best laws of Ohio, which authorizes a tax of one-tenth of a mill to be levied for free libraries, in every York could easily get up a score of such libraries, and perhaps a few of them may, in the long run, do more to civilize our young barbarians than the additional six hundred men now proposed as a reinforcement of the present Police army.

We did not intend yesterday to speak of our groaning "over the decoy of the 'legitimate' drama," for we don't know that that furnishes any cause of groaning. The proof-reader who thus distorted our grief over the "decay of the drama," and who at the same time gave BOOTH'S Romeo one of the "largest" instead of the longest runs, is responsible for the dreadful groaning of the distracted readers of our enigmatical topic yesterday.

It is amusing to see the different members of the Bourbon families putting forth their claims, arguing their case, displaying their merits and making pitiful appeals in their own behalf through the newspapers. It's all up with the ancient, gorgeous and terrible dynasty of the Bourbons when they have to beg for recognition through the newspapers. It's all up with divine right. It's all up with poor old royalty.

The well-known ruffian A assaulted and robbed the respectable stranger B. The Police succeeded in arresting A, who immediately gave bail" and was released, but B was locked up in the House of Detention, where he will find himself well punished during his incarceration. This curious item, with slight variations, is constantly appearing in the newspapers of this City.

Mr. GLADSTONE spoke like an oracle recently, at the Fishmonger's Hall dinner to Her Majesty's Ministers, setting forth his purposes in general terms. But his grand design was sufficiently foreshadowed as one which would undo the old policy of England regarding Ireland and Irishmen, and put the latter on a level with Englishmen and Scotchmen,—thereby helping to turn the respectable history of England into a sort of "old almanac." Times are greatly changed when Earl SPENCER, the Viceroy, hobnobs familiarly at a banquet with Cardinal CULLEN, as at the Dublin Mansion House the other day. A Catholic—O'HAGAN—is Lord Chancellor of Ireland; and in a year or two a Catholic may sit in the seat of Chancellor MORE without any inordinate anxiety about the head on his shoulders.

A French Dr. BUISSON, in the magazine called La Ferme, says he himself had hydrophobia caught from the bite of a dog, and cured himself with a Russian vapor bath heated to fifty-seven degrees, centigrade. Unless the man is a downright cheat, there is probably something in this vapor-action relieving the circulation through the pores of the skin; and it should be remembered by those who may, at any time, have to deal with a case of hydrophobia. This is not the first time those vapor baths have been spoken of as an effective cure of that terrible malady.

The Popedom does not seem to "bate a jot of heart or hope." A review of the Roman army, as a pretty significant hint for the Garibaldians and other carbonari, made a splendid feature of the late Carnival festivities at Rome. And now it is stated that the Ecumenical Council will, next Autumn, arrange for the election of all future Popes, during the life of incumbents, in order, of course, to guard against that danger of swapping horses in the very act of crossing the stream, which Mr. LINCOLN so shrewdly warned people against. A hitch in the conclave, a "ring" (Fisherman's) of ultramontane Bishops, or a row in the street, might result from the present custom; and the powers that be seem prepared to forestall any such contretemps.

A letter from Frankfort to the Louisville Courier-Journal says it is believed there, by parties likely to be well-informed, that Ex-President JOHNSON does not desire a nomination for Governor of Tennessee, but that he will seek an election from that State to the United States Senate, and will canvass the State with a view to that end in the campaign next Summer. He will be very likely to carry his point if he does. He is powerful in a popular canvass, and is said never to have been defeated.

One by one the products of foreign and domestic cultivation are finding themselves at home in California, taking root and growing—both agriculturally and commercially speaking. Smyrna and Naples have been the delicious names associated with the fragrant fig; but in California the native dried figs are crowding the foreign importations from the market, and soon some enterprising merchant will be sending them to New-York, and perhaps to Europe. If California grain should go abroad and find welcome, why not her fruit? In the name of the Profit, Figs!

Gov. HUNT, of Colorado, despairing of much aid from the army, proposes that "every man between Cheyenne and Trinidad," see to it that he has a good gun and plenty of ammunition, and use them in all emergencies; he suggests that this is the best way to deal with the Indians. Clearly enough this is precisely what it will come to, if Congress leaves the matter in its present unsatisfactory condition. A private war which will probably end in the murder of a great many frontier settlers, with their families, and the ultimate extermination of the Indians, is the prospect ahead just now.

In the present session of the British Parliament the question of voting by ballot is to be brought forward by the distinguished diplomatist, Sir HENRY BULWER; and there is now a better prospect of the ballot passing into law than at any previous time during the many years of its discussion. The London Review says that the ballot has "passed from the category of things that cannot be to the category of things that must be;" and though it will be strongly opposed by the Tories, who have been furnished with arguments against it by JOHN STUART MILL, the Liberals feel assured of its success under GLADSTONE'S Administration.

One phase of the foreign demand for United States bonds is the increasing partiality of thrifty people in England for five-twenties, which pay six dollars a year, in coin, on each eighty-two dollars invested in them. It is not probable that, with the assurance which the Schenck bill specifically gives of the ultimate honorable liquidation of the public indebtedness, the mass of even English investors will hesitate to buy United States six per cent, coin bonds, at any figure under the prevailing market price for British three per cents, which stand, in London at 93.

It has always been a notable fact that the new States of the West are less conservative and more ready to test the "varieties of untried being" than the people of the East—than even Massachusetts herself. Here we have the Legislature of Nevada, a State yet in the gristle, almost adopting the law of female suffrage—seventeen being for it, while twenty-one were against it. Three votes improperly tampered with in the lobby might have established a very startling state of things—an actual basis from which the advocates of the sex could make an effective advance in their demands for more everywhere.

"The primary cause of the calamities of Spain," says NAPIER, in his History of the Peninsular War, "was the despotism arising from the union of a superstitious Court with a sanguinary priesthood." The superstitious Court has now been cleared out from 8pain, and the sanguinary priesthood are being taught a lesson well calculated to change their ideas of the ecclesiastical necessities of the nineteenth century.

OBITUARY.

Alphonse de Lamartine.

LAMARTINE, the great French poet and historian, died in Paris yesterday in the 79th year of his age. The brief announcement of his death will be found in our cable dispatches, and will carry sadness to the heart of every reader. LAMARTINE was born at Mâcon, Oct. 21, 1791. His family name was PRAT, but he early adopted the name of his maternal uncle, LAMARTINE, who left him a considerable fortune, in return for which the poet made the name a household word in every land. His full name was ALPHONSE MARIE LOUIS PRAT DE LAMARTINE. His father, a Captain in the Light Horse, refusing to join hands with the Terrorists, left Paris about the year 1794, with his wife and children, was arrested at Mâcon and thrown into a dungeon, where he remained till the 9th Thermidor,—but a few months,—when there was another change in revolutionary France. The Captain feared another tempest, and retired to the old Château de Willy, in the midst of the wildest scenes of nature. There a beautiful, tender, devout, high-souled mother taught the young poet to read from the Bible, and took him with her in her visits of charity to the neighboring poor. Fit school for the infancy of genius! His little hands were filled with precious gifts for the needy; with lisping voice he read the story of Joseph; nature spoke to him from the hills and the fields; and God spoke to him through the soul of a worshiping mother. At eight years of age he was sent to complete his education at Belley, in the College of the Pères de la Foi, which was in the hands of the Jesuits. The poet there put forth, as it were spontaneously, his wings, and bore away the prizes at the end of each year.

His college studies finished, the military father was for having his first-born embrace a career of arms. Not so thought the gentle mother. She sent him to pass some time with his relatives at Lyons, and permission was also granted him to travel with them in Italy. Impatient of the restraint laid upon him by his traveling companions, he wrote home to obtain the privilege of journeying alone. He did not wait for a reply. At 18 years of age he found himself master of his own movements, in a land full of enchantment for all, especially for one so imaginative and so young. A first tenor of the San Carlo at Naples was met on the road, traveling with his young nephew, of the same age with LAMARTINE. The two young people took a sudden liking to each other, talked together unmusically, and at night used each others' shoulders in the carriage as pillows to sleep upon. The next morning, at Rome, the young traveler was awakened by the voice of his companion. He opened the door, and found a beautiful Roman girl, who smiled at his astonishment, and told him that a change in dress did not imply a change of heart.

LAMARTINE arrived at Naples, and his purse was exhausted. Fortune favors the brave; he found there a young classmate who had been provided by a rich father with ample credit upon the banking-houses of Italy. The two friends walked by the Bay of Naples, and along the Mergellina. The belle Romaine was soon forgotten. The young poet found there GRAZIELLA. Poor child of the South! hard was thy lot although thy name has been placed high in the temple of fame, and beneath it has been written by a poetic hand a mournful eulogy, every word of which is a mingled sigh and tear.

After about three years' absence, the romantic wanderer returned to the paternal roof. The family, in the meantime, had returned to Mâcon. The father saw nothing but the more developed youth. The mother, with woman's instinct, read the history of his heart in his pale face. She put her beautiful hand upon his mouth, when he was in his naïve confidence, about to describe to her the object of his grief, and asks him what he will now do when a dreamy, monotonous and void existence exposes him to culpable passions of the heart. The fortune of the family is narrow; if her tears could be turned to gold, how she would enrich him! He would go to Paris, that city of all illusions, and pursue the vocation of literature. His father allowed him a pension of twelve hundred francs a year, which was not enough to defray the necessary expenses of the gay and costly metropolis. The mother slipped secretly into his hand a large diamond, the last of the jewels of her youth. Poor mother! What would you not have done for the boy upon whom you proudly built such high hopes!

To Paris went the young man of 22, armed with plenty of introductions to influential people. His opinions were not yet settled. Conversing with TALMA about a tragedy of "Saul," he was, for the moment, a Bonapartist—dancing with the most spirituelle women the civilized world affords, in the Faubourg Saint Germain, he became an enthusiastic Legitimist. Soon he grew weary of the elegant dissipations of the gayest capital of Europe, and, haunted by the dear shadows of the past, returned to Italy. He stood alone by the shore where he had stood with his GRAZIELLA. He poured out his soul in poetic Meditations, full of dreamy sweetness, and all alive with gentle, plaintive melody, as the warm Summer air is musical with innumerable humming insects. While he was calling, like a lonely bird, his lost mate along the shores of the bay of Naples, news reached him of the invasion of France by the allied armies, and of the reëstablishment of the Bourbons on the throne. Our melancholy poet went post-haste to Paris, charmed his military father by entering the Guards, but threw down the sword during the Hundred Days, and did not resume it when LOUIS XVIII. traversed the silent field of Waterloo to take possession of the Tuileries.

Then it was that LAMARTINE had a real love. It was no longer the wild passion of the boy, but the calm affection of the man. But five years after the death of GRAZIELLA, the "lean fellow that beats all conquerors" also embraced his adored ELVIRE. He loved her with a genuine affection, and when her eyes closed to the visible world, a part of his own being seemed to awaken in the world invisible. Henceforth he was a Christian. A malady seized upon his weary body, but an unspeakable peace took possession of his soul. He burned all his poems that contained questionable sentiments, for the man, having become spiritual, could no longer relish the sensual.

His first Meditations were prepared; but the poet had to wait two years before finding a publisher. At length his manuscript was taken by a libraire named NICOLLE, who, thinking to bestow a favor at his own probable loss, made his fortune. The volume appeared in 1820, and in less than two years the publisher sold forty-five thousand copies. It was anonymous, yet LAMARTINE'S name was soon known from end to end of Europe. CHATEAUBRIAND said of one poem in the collection, the "Ode to Byron," "it is worth more than the whole of my Genius of Christianity."

Henceforth fortune smiled upon the young poet. He went to Florence, attached to the French Legation. He there found again a beautiful Anglaise, whom he had previously met at the baths of Aix. In two months they were married. She gave him a true woman's heart, and she brought him a large dowery. Soon after, in 1823, appeared his second volume of Meditations. The Government rewarded him with the cross for the "Ode à Bonaparte" and the "Chant du Sacre," which the volume contained. An uncle, in the meantime died and left him a considerable fortune. He was successively sent as Secretary of Legation to London and to Naples. Finally he returned to Florence as Chargé d'Affairs. On his return to Paris he published, in 1829, the Poetic and Religious Harmonies.

The Government was upon the point—which opened the way for his admission to the Academy the next year—of sending M. DE LAMARTINE as Minister Plenipotentiary to Greece, when the revolution of July broke out. The poetic diplomatist, instead of setting out for the land of HOMER and PINDAR, retired to his chateau of Saint Point, which had been left him by his uncle. He was somewhat restless in his retreat, and made delicate overtures to be returned to the Chamber. MERY and BARTHELEMY in the Némésis applied hot irons or political satire to the shrinking flesh of the sensitive poet, and the electors of Toulon and Dunkerque refused to return him.

Then it was that the author of Meditations embarked with his family for the East. All the world has read the Voyage en Orient, and knows the story of his visit to Lady ESTHER STANHOPE, neice of WILLIAM PITT, who had become an Oriental astrologist, who examined, not the palm, but the foot, of LAMARTINE, and predicted to him an exalted destiny. On that memorable voyage, too, he lost his daughter JULIA, the jewel of his life.

After his return to France, the electors of Dunkerque were more favorable, and he was sent as Député to the Chambre. The poet there improvised pathetically and sublimely, and men listened to the music. Many Frenchmen of all parties have spoken satirically of that music, but it was the voice of humanity—a voice that is the echo of a throbbing human heart that men listen to even when they know not why. The same music was in the Girondins, which king and courtier heard with breathless, indefinable terror, which filled the susceptible hearts of the children of France with a new sentiment of liberty. That music was not only heard within the walls inclosing a legislative body, but it resounded from end to end of France. During the reform movement of 1848 at the Hotel de Ville, the most tumultuous populace instantly grew calm and silent, to listen for a moment to that music. "Citizens, the red flag that you bring us has never made any but the tour of the Champ de Mars, trailed in the people's blood, and the tri-colored flag has made the tour of the world with the name, the glory, and the liberty of our country!" France was saved by music—such music as a great heart makes upon honest lips—such music as men will pause in the midst of carnage to hear.

After the revolution of that year he became a member of the Provisional Government as Minister for Foreign Affairs. His popularity for a time was very great, and at the election he was returned for no less than ten different departments. He was, with his colleagues, driven from power in June of that year, and at the election for 1849 was entirely omitted in the returns. After the coup d'état in December, 1851, LAMARTINE retired to private life, and thenceforward devoted himself to literary pursuits.

In his later years LAMARTINE was poor. He had been both extravagant and over-generous. At Florence, at London, at Naples, he lived beyond his income. He had a vessel fitted up at his own expense for his journey to the East, the expense of which journey was not less than half a million of francs. His benevolence completed his ruin. He was the acknowledged head of the republican party at Paris, and many a poor follower lived upon his generosity. A well-known man wrote to him the laconic letter:—"I am dying with hunger." LAMARTINE responded:—"I have five hundred francs; here they are—pardon me for doing so little with all my heart." A faithful and very intimate friend one day entered the modest house occupied by M. and Mme. DE LAMARTINE, and pleasantly demanded the keys. "I will be the factotum," he said, "I will hold the purse." The secretaire was locked and the friend went away with the key in his pocket. There soon entered a woman begging for the poor. Mme. DE LAMARTINE ordered the lock to be broken, extracted 800 francs in bills, and gave them for the parish poor. LAMARTINE looked on approving and smiling. The friend entered soon after, and found them without anything to dine upon.

At this time he was dependent upon his pen for his daily bread—and his daily charity. He wrote an incredible quantity, and received for his writings incredible sums. He wrote, too with incredible swiftness. The editor of a journal went to him one day to obtain an extract from the Girondins. Nothing was ready, and he wrote enough to make three columns, in a half hour, while talking with the editor. He improvised always, and his histories are chiefly valuable for the music in them. In Raphael, Geneviève, Toussaint-Louverture, the Histoire de la Restauration, the Constituents, in everything, it is the voice of the poet that we love to hear.

The vanity of M. DE LAMARTINE was as sublime as his nature! His vanity, like his nature again, was kindly. If he loved to receive extravagant praise, he also took pleasure in bestowing it. A young lady said to him one evening, during the reign of Democracy, "You are about to be made President of the Republic." "No," he responded, "that belongs to VICTOR HUGO; I shall be President of the Universal Republic." The large-headed egotist saw, in his splendid dream, all Europe united in one Republic, and himself benignly guiding its destiny. His vanity, too, was fed with the most extravagant praise. One of the most beautiful women of Paris cried out, kissing his hand: "FRANKLIN said to VOLTAIRE, God and Liberty; I say God and LAMARTINE." The salons of the Faubourg St. Germain might well turn the heads of stronger men than LAMARTINE in those days.

LAMARTINE was as brave as well as generous, laborious and vain. Real courage alone enabled him to face the enraged populace at the Hotel de Ville. When he was Chargé d'Affaires at Florence, an Italian Colonel abruptly entered his room one morning, and demanded whether he had written certain lines in the Dernier Chant du Pelvinage d'Harold—one of LAMARTINE'S poems. The lines bitterly lamented the degeneracy of the Italians. The Colonel read the offensive passage, and demanded the poet to efface them or he would himself efface them with his sword. The author calmly responded: "I sometimes yield to a prayer, but never to a threat." They fought in the very garden of the Embassy, and LAMARTINE received a wound so grave that he was for some weeks between life and death.

In private life LAMARTINE was worthy of all praise. If he was vain before men he was humble before God. His open purse, open heart and open mouth blessed hungry multitudes, while no one had cause to complain of his hatred.

LAMARTINE was a prolific writer, and among many other works was author of Le Génie du Christianisme, Trois Mois du Pauvoit, published in 1848; Histoire de la Revolution de 1848, in 1849; Histoire de la Restauration, 1851-63; Histoire de la Turquie, in 1854, and Histoire de la Russie, in 1855.

Wyman B. S. Moor.

The death of Mr. WYMAN B. S. MOOR, formerly United States Senator from Maine, is announced as having occurred yesterday in Virginia. Mr. MOOR was born in Waterville, Me., Nov. 3, 1814. He graduated at Waterville College, studied law at Cambridge, and was admitted to the Bar in 1834. Entering earnestly into politics, he joined the Democrat ranks and was elected to the State Legislature in 1839, and subsequently became Attorney-General of the State. In 1848 he was appointed to succeed JOHN FAIRFIELD in the United States Senate, and served out that term. In 1857 he was appointed by President BUCHANAN Consul-General for the British American Provinces. In later years he was largely identified with the railroad interests of his State. He had recently gone to Virginia for his health, where he died.

Hannibal Hamlin as a Private Soldier.

A recent letter from Portsmouth, N. H., tells the following:

"In the year 1863, during the dark days of the war, there might have been seen at Fort McClary, in Kittery, Me., and at the mouth of our harbor, a soldier who performed all the duties of a private in the ranks and a guard, and was not even clothed with the power of a fourth corporal—but who, in the event of the death of President LINCOLN, would have at once become the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States—and yet with that necessary consciousness, he was willing to place himself in the position of a common soldier, bear their hardships, share with them in their messes, bear about him his own tin dipper and reside in their barracks. This was the position of Hon. HANNIBAL HAMLIN, then Vice-President of the United States, and private in the Maine State Guard Company A, of Bangor, now United States Senator elect. Thus a sound-headed man unstrictly portrayed the features of the simplicity of our institutions and the beautics of republicanism."

Gov. Geary on Dictation to Gen. Grant.

From the Harrisburg (Penn.) State Guard, March 1.

Gov. GEARY, on Saturday afternoon, received a telegraphic dispatch from New-York informing him that a meeting of Republicans from Pennsylvania was about to be held at the Astor House, relative to the appointment by Gen. GRANT of a Pennsylvanian for a Cabinet officer, and asking the opinion of the Governor in regard to his choice in this particular. He immediately replied, in substance, that as Gen. GRANT had to bear the pains, penalties and responsibilities of the Presidential office, he should be left free to select his coadjutors and subordinates, without let or hindrance, dictation, instruction or interference of any kind, or from any source, whatever.

The Catholic Church Troubles in Auburn.

From the Rochester Chronicle, March 1.

The disturbance in the Church of the Holy Family at Auburn, over the order of Bishop MCQUAID supplanting Rev. Mr. O'FLAHERTY and supplying his place with Rev. Mr. KAVANAUGH, has not yet concluded. Bishop MCQUAID was in town yesterday morning, and at the 8 o'clock meeting Rev. Mr. O'FLAHERTY commenced the service. The Bishop and Rev. Mr. KAVANAUGH went to the church, and finding him there, ordered him outside of the altar railings. He refused to obey the order, insisting that he was still pastor of the church. The Bishop then said he "would not have service to-day, (yesterday,) and retired to another church, delivering an address in which Rev. Mr. O'FLAHERTY was censured for his rebellious conduct. The same parties were in attendance that were present the previous Sunday, and some of the Auburn Police were on hand to prevent any outbreak.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Miss KELLOGG made her rentrée here last evening, and was the recipient of a hearty and sincere welcome from the largest audience of the season. The opera was "Faust," a work in which the lady is widely known. Her conception of the character of Marguerite is poetic, passionate and picturesque—picturesque even to small particulars. No one has determined precisely what Marguerite should be, but we are persuaded that few would object to the Marguerite so delightfully limned by Miss KELLOGG. The rôle has always been one of her best. It gave her character, individuality and position at once in Europe, and amid the many Marguerites will find a lasting place in musical history. We have spoken so frequently of Miss KELLOGG in this part, that it is only necessary now to say that she was in excellent voice, and never sang or appeared to greater advantage.

The general distribution of the opera was fair. Herr HABELMANN sang in Italian. A facetious notice to that effect was inserted in the programme—as though it were an unusual thing in Italian opera to hear the Italian language. He sang well and was warmly applauded. Signor ANTONUCCI was the Mephistopheles. The free, beautiful, clear and sympathetic voice of this artist has never been sufficiently recognized in this part. He does not possess dramatic power, but every vocal qualification he has to perfection. In the dearth of bassos we are not likely to find his better.

The smaller parts were well rendered and the orchestra and chorus were quite good. The opera will be repeated on Wednesday.

Theatrical.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

Mr. FLORENCE revived the "Ticket-of-Leave Man" at this theatre last evening. Mr. TOM TAYLOR'S drama is a forcible piece of stage work, and will always command the attention of its audiences. The day of its great impression and great crowds, however, is passed, and it must take the shelf now, with "George Barnwell" and "The Bottle" for occasional reproduction in the times of unusual clerical stir and revivalistic excitement. During the existing furor of crime the "Ticket-of-Leave Man" is a decidedly unpopular character. Nevertheless, the revival of the play met with comparative favor last night. It is creditably produced, and the representation is, in some respects, equal to any previous performance in this City. Mr. and Mrs. FLORENCE, for instance, reappear in their familiar rôles of Brierly and St. Evremond. Miss MARY WELLS enlarges somewhat on the garrulous humor of Mrs. Willoughby, but still does not step beyond the limits of endurance. A marked and pleasant feature of the remaining cast was the appearance of Miss ADA HARLAND as May Edwards. This lady sheds her burlesque shell with ease. She will be remembered as a member of the Lydia Thompson troupe during the earlier performances at Wood's Museum. She brings to aid her in domestic drama an interesting face and a flexible voice; but to the former, which is freely expressive when used, she gives too much rest, and to the latter, which is very voluble, too free rein. She exhibits a tendency, in fact, to gallop over her sentences. These little sins corrected and Miss HARLAND may make an enduring impression in sympathetic rôles of the May Edwards' stripe. She dressed with much taste.

The engagement of Mr. and Mrs. FLORENCE is to continue four weeks longer at Wood's; this fact we publish for the benefit of readers out of the City, who may be deceived by the announcements of a party calling themselves "The Florence Burlesque Troupe." Mr. and Mrs. W. J. FLORENCE desire to have their friends know that they have no connection with this company.

BROUGHAM'S THEATRE.

Mr. BROUGHAM produced the amusing bagatelle entitled "Jenny Lind," last evening, previous to "Pocahontas," in order that Miss JENNIE KIMBALL might be seen as the joking heroine. The débutante appeared to be wholly at her ease before the footlights, as she has every cause to be, after some years of experience in Boston and the New-England towns as an actress of burlesque and opera bouffe. The lady evinces no particular talent for comic acting, nor for the broad mimicry required in the character of Jenny Leatherlungs. The singing which belongs to the part, however, was delivered with signal self-reliance. In addition to much new music, which takes the place of mirth in the piece, Miss KIMBALL introduces a bit of masquerading that is in rather questionable taste. The part has usually afforded its personator no opportunity for the exposition of the female figure. We have no doubt that many a star with lemon-colored hair has scratched this role from her list, simply because it gave no show for "legs!" The débutante of last night made her opportunity, however, by casting off her long skirts, and appearing before the "Students of Heidelberg," who have come to serenade Jenny Lind, in fleshings, and the other etceteras of undress now so popular on the stage. Thus disguised, she sang a song about her "pretty gaiter boots," then retired, and in a few minutes reappeared in train again! The reason for this extraordinary departure from common sense was not vouchsafed, either in the text or the subsequent action, and went far to nullify any favorable impression the débutante may have made through her singing. Mr. E. LAMB contributed to the amusement of the audience by his peculiar oddities as Granby Gag.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Mr. MARK SMITH reappeared at Booth's Theatre last evening as Friar Laurence, which, for the past two weeks, has been sustained by Mr. D. W. WALLER, during Mr. SMITH'S absence at the funeral obsequies of his father.

We are happy to state that the rumor anent Miss MARKHAM'S eyes is unfounded. Those orbs—as CHARLES READE would say—are yet unfathomed by fate. They shine for all. The sun is watched for its spots, and so, when Miss MARKHAM had a small trouble with one eye, every one found a prophecy in it, but, like most prophecies, it has not been fulfilled. Miss MARKHAM'S eyes are as good as they are beautiful. She will make her reappearance in the "Forty Thieves," at Niblo's, on Thursday evening.

Miss BATEMAN has entered into an engagement with Mr. BOOTH, commencing on the 20th of September next and extending through ten weeks, to play a series of her principal rôles at his beautiful establishment.

About this time of year we always hear something about MAPLESON. Like the Campbells, he is coming. This year there is a playful variation on the familiar theme. Mr. JOHN MITCHELL, a very worthy gentleman, is to bring Mr. MAPLESON'S artists, and Mr. MAPLESON is not particularly dwelt upon. The Academy folk, it is said, are urgent to have him. It only remains to be seen whether Mr. JOHN MITCHELL is anxious to have the Academy folk.

And while these things are bruited in the lobbies, we hear that NILSSON and an overwhelming force of artists will take possession of the Grand Opera House and play there to the death. Mr. MARETZEK, the fiery untamed impresario, will, in all probability, perform his daring acts betwixt these two extremes. Perhaps he may find himself in the saddle when both his opponents are unhorsed.

A domestic emergency of an alarming nature has compelled Miss ROSE ETTINGE to transform herself from the merry Beatrice to the most anxious of nurses. She did not, in consequence, appear last evening in "Much Ado About Nothing." The part of Lady Disdain was sustained in a charmingly chirrupy manner by Mrs. JENNINGS, and the rôle of Hero, formerly sustained by this lady, was undertaken by Miss ANNIE WARD.

Lecture on the Desert of Mt. Sinai.

Rev. ABBOTT KITTREDGE delivered last evening in the Presbyterian Church, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, a lecture on the "Desert of Mt. Sinai," which, in matter and manner, was both entertaining and instructive. After briefly describing his experience and associations with some of the tribes of that region, he gave an interesting and often amusing account of the habits, manners, laws and religious ideas of a tribe, or part of a tribe, which formed his escort on a four weeks' journey from Suez to Hebron. The Sheik, though acknowledged chief and judge over six thousand souls, yet sometimes it was painfully manifest that his authority was by no means either respected or dreaded, even among the youngest of his tribe. As an illustration of this, he described on occasion on their journey, when a very young lad who led the speaker's camel had evidently been guilty of some infraction of law which exited deeply the wrath of the Sheik. He, the lecturer, naturally expected to see the boy punished, but to his surprise the Sheik brought the boy to him for that purpose, and on asking the Sheik why he did not himself inflict the deserved punishment, the little fellow immediately doubled up his fists and dared the old man of sixty to put a hand on him—a daring which manifestly he was accustomed to exercise with impunity. He then described their habit of carrying weapons and taking individual revenge as a punishment for crime. For the former act they would be punished here, and the latter was not to be thought of. Yet he believed it tended there to the security of human life rather than the contrary. Their theory of "blood for blood" seems to have come down among them from the ages far past, when on Sinai's top, which o'ershadows their land, the great Law-giver declared that "he who sheddeth man's blood by man, shall his blood be shed." So solemnly obligatory do they regard it to slay the slayer of their relations that it is apparently done from a pressure of duty, and unaccompanied by any tinge of revengeful feeling. Their mode of collecting debts when, if the debtor cannot pay, and will not give his camel, the creditor is authorized to steal it at the first opportunity; their early marriages and singular courtship; the subordination of woman, who looses her head if she indulge the temerity of asking for a husband; the seasons of second marriage varying from ten days to two years after the husband's death, in proportion to the degree of estimation in which he was held; their vague theory of punishment for sin in the place of fire; their charity, their deceit and insatiable covetousness, were all described with rare wit, and to the evident delight of the audience.

The lecturer closed with a glowing picture of the scenery which surrounded and the sentiments which filled him, as he stood on the summit of Sinai, the place where God made his glory visible to Israel, and from thence gazed o'er those plains where two million souls once encamped, and who for more than three thousand years have slept in death—and then recalled with grateful heart that only other grander scene in all the world's history, Calvary!

Boys in Blue.

The Spencer Legion of the Boys in Blue, of which Gen. BARRENT VAN BUREN is President and WM. MOORE Secretary, met last evening at No. 206 Eighth-avenue, for the purpose of making preparations to go to Washington in a body to attend the inauguration of President GRANT.

The Legion will be composed of about fifty members, under the command of Major JOHN A. MEEK, and will leave by the 8:40 train on Wednesday morning.

In addition to those who leave in a body from this City, a number of the members are now in Washington, and will take part in the celebration. They will be dressed in dark clothes, with the Grant Hat, and will wear a satin badge with the inscription: "Spencer Legion—GRANT and COLFAX—Boys in Blue." Those desiring to join the members of the Legion on their trip can meet with them at the hall, No. 206 Eighth-avenue, this evening.

Attempted Wife Murder.

Last evening ALFRED JONES, now residing at No. 142 West-street, visited No. 238 Greene-street for the purpose of obtaining an interview with a woman to whom he had been married, but who, for some time past, has refused to live with him, and who is now known as ELIZABETH DAVENPORT. When JONES called last night he endeavored to induce his wife to return to his home, which she refused, in decided terms, to do. JONES then apparently became enraged, and drawing a large knife from under his coat aimed a blow at his wife, which she fortunately avoided, as she had observed his movement. She then gave an alarm, which brought Officer WATTS, of the Fifteenth Precinct, when JONES was arrested and locked up in the Mercer-street Police Station-house upon the complaint of his wife, and will be arraigned before Justice DODGE this morning.

Another Attempt at Wife Murder this Morning.

At 12:30 o'clock this morning EDWARD JUGGOLS assaulted his wife JULIA, at No. 443 East Thirteenth-street, with a hand-saw, inflicting several severe wounds, which are deemed to be of a dangerous if not fatal character. The screams of the woman attracted the attention of the Police, who rushed into the building in time to save her from more desperate injury, and also in season to arrest the brutal husband, who was taken to the Seventeenth Precinct Station-house, where he was locked up. The wounded woman was removed to Bellevue Hospital in a precarious condition.

Adrian College—New Professor Elected.

Rev. Dr. BAKER, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims in this City, has been elected Professor of Rhetoric in Adrian College, and has accepted the office. The loss to the College by fire of the south (ladies') hall, on the 2d of February, though severe and but partly covered by insurance, has not interrupted the regular progress of the several departments or the classes. Promptly on the day following the fire, the trustees inaugurated efficient measures to rebuild. The citizens of Adrian and vicinity have come to their aid with a commendable liberality, attesting the popularity of the College. The students, also responding to the call, have organized an association for the purpose of procuring aid to replace the Hall.

Taylor, of the United States Army, are at the Metropolitan Hotel. Gen. A. B. Lacey, of Charlestown, is at the Gladstone House. Hon. A. C. Mattoon, of Oswego, and Hon. E. Burrows, of Massachusetts, are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. Hon. J. C. Paige, of New-Orleans, is at the St. James Hotel. Gen. J. H. Battell, of the United States Army, and Hon. M. J. Woodruff, of Connecticut, are at the Astor House.

There was to have been a grand "real estate distribution" at Gardiner, Missouri, on Saturday night last, but the manager announced to the assembled ticket-holders that as only 76,000 tickets had been sold, he should withdraw several of the principal prizes. Considerable confusion followed this announcement, during which the gas was turned off, and the manager took advantage of the convenient darkness to escape.

THE INAUGURATION HAT.—When WHITFIELD was in this country a pious old lady made a day's journey to hear him preach, but was unable, on account of the immense crowd, to get within reach of his voice. On returning home her neighbors asked if she had heard him. "No," replied the fervent old dame, "but I've seen his blessed wig." People who are unable to attend the ceremonies of inauguration next Thursday, may console themselves, after the same fashion, by taking a look at the very elegant "Inauguration Hat," made expressly for GEN. GRANT by JAS. MCBRIDE, of this City, which will be on exhibition to-day at the manufacturer's establishment, No. 75 Mercer street.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

A Political, Literary and Miscellaneous Newspaper.

The NEW-YORK TIMES,—started in September, 1851,—has for many years been recognized as among the most successful, popular and influential newspapers in the country. It is still under the control and management of its original founders, who, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of the public.

In its political discussions and preferences the TIMES is Republican,—and supports the cardinal principles and leading measures of that party as on the whole best calculated to secure the peace and promote the prosperity of all sections of our common country. It was among the first to advocate the nomination and election of GEN. GRANT to the Presidency, and will sustain, with all the ability it can command, the principles and policy of his Administration.

The TIMES will insist upon Reform in all branches of the public service,—economy in the administration of the Government,—the payment of the public debt and the maintenance of the public credit,—the adoption of equal and impartial suffrage,—the removal of useless political disabilities,—the preservation of peace,—the elevation of labor,—the vindication of our national rights,—and, in general, such measures as will strengthen our Republican institutions in the confidence of our own people, and commend them to the respect and admiration of the rest of the world.

As a NEWSPAPER, the TIMES will continue to be, as it has been, unsurpassed.

Its CORRESPONDENCE, by Telegraph and by Mail, from all parts of the world, will be full, prompt, reliable and interesting. In this respect it will maintain the high reputation it has thus far enjoyed.

Its REPORTS of proceedings in Congress and in the State Legislature,—of the Law Courts, social, political and literary associations, public meetings, and of whatever else may enlist or attract the public interest, will be prepared with care and with special attention to the convenience and instruction of the great body of the Reading Public. In its Commercial, Financial, Real Estate and general Market Reports, special pains will be taken to embody the latest news, in the most reliable and acceptable form.

A LITERARY Department will be maintained, in which will be given Reviews and notices of all the important and interesting issues of the Press;—and the Fine Arts, including Music, the Drama, painting and sculpture, will receive careful attention at the hands of competent and experienced critics.

The EDITORIAL Department of the TIMES will be devoted to the intelligent, temperate and useful discussion of the current events of the day, in every department of public activity and interest, with the general aim of instructing and guiding the public mind rather than exciting public passion or ministering to a morbid curiosity. Special care will be taken to exclude everything which can deprave the morals, or lower the taste of the great body of intelligent readers.

The Sunday Edition of the TIMES contains, in addition to all the news of the day, from eight to ten columns of interesting literary matter, selected with great care from the latest periodical literature of this country and Europe, including the best stories, poems, &c., besides original articles by accomplished writers on subjects of general interest. It is therefore not only a NEWSPAPER, in the proper sense of the word, but a journal of ART, LITERATURE and FASHION; and no pains are spared to make it the most complete and interesting Sunday newspapers in the country. The matter it contains is always fresh and new, and is arranged in a tasteful and attractive manner.

The TIMES issues three editions, all of the very largest size, on large quarto sheets, each containing fifty-six columns, printed in clear and legible type, at the following rates:

SMALL-POX.

Prevalence of the Disease within the Metropolitan District—Precautions Urged by the Health Authorities—Vaccination to be Performed Without Charge.

Yesterday, at the meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Health, Sanitary Superintendent HARRIS reported that of late the small-pox had been gradually spreading in various parts of the Metropolitan District, and that it was present in the City among such classes of inhabitants and in such places as to render it imperatively necessary for the people to attend forthwith to the duty of vaccination. The necessity for this precaution, he said, was scarcely less in the rural portion of the Metropolitan District and throughout the State than in this City. Though the contagion of this loathsome disease was kept very closely under control in New-York and Brooklyn, it was found that there were too many unvaccinated persons among our crowded population to permit any assurance of continued security unless the people were aroused to the duty of applying the great protective agency of vaccination.

Dr. HARRIS' report continued as follows:

From all sections of the State of New-York, and from cities in the West and South, we are informed that vaccination has been greatly neglected ever since the last year of the war. During the war a great epidemic of small-pox drove the people into a temporary and badly managed epidemic of vaccination. General alarm then led to a great amount of very defective and spurious vaccination, as well as to an still greater amount that was properly performed and good. Since that period there has been a vast increase of our population by births and by foreign immigrants that have still unprotected against small-pox. Our sanitary correspondents in different parts of the country estimate the present proportion of the unvaccinated at from seven to twenty per cent. of the total population, according to the intelligence and public spirit of the medical men and the inhabitants generally in different towns and cities. Investigations which have recently been commenced by us in this City already prove that the worst negligence of vaccination known to us on the continent prevails right here in this great centre of trade and population. The Board of Health has acted promptly upon the first intimation of this fact, by promulgating its notice and orders to the people to attend to the duty of vaccination. The cases of small-pox receive the kind of sanitary care and control which that contagion requires, but the neglect of vaccination still continues. The best-informed dispensary physician informs us that of all the children under four years of age in the City tenement-houses not more than four or five out of every ten are yet vaccinated. In a number of the better class of tenement-houses in the Ninth Ward a Sanitary Inspector reports a twelve per-cent. of all their inhabitants unvaccinated. In a series of over-crowded tenement rookeries in the Sixth Ward, near Chatham-square, an Inspector reports that he found only sixty-eight persons unvaccinated in a consecutive examination of 738 inhabitants in eight houses. These facts are sufficient to prove how greatly the duty of vaccination is neglected; but in the squalid portions of the Fifth and other regions known as the shanty districts near the Central Park, the record of neglected vaccination is still worse. The medical officers of the Board in the rural portions of the Metropolitan District are anxious to prevent the occurrence of small-pox in their respective fields, were three weeks ago supplied with approved vaccine virus, and, as soon as they had obtained a sufficient stock of it by means of fresh vaccinations, they arranged to offer this priceless boon freely to the poor. Each of these Assistant Sanitary Inspectors has designated the places, days, and hours, in which vaccination will be performed. In view of the commendable efforts of the Assistant Sanitary Inspectors of the rural villages those gentlemen are endeavoring to keep up a stock of pure and active vaccine lymph for gratuitous use. This great work of the Board of Medical Officers in the rural towns is cordially seconded by all other intelligent physicians in the respective local cities, and on Staten Island the (Richmond) County Medical Society is carrying out the same plans which were adopted two years ago. The medical attendants (Committees from that Society) at the Infirmary in Edgewater now vaccinate at 11 o'clock A. M. daily, without distinction as to poverty. Besides the vaccination stations and houses mentioned in the subjoined schedules, several physicians in the suburban portion of the district have informed the Sanitary Superintendent that they are preparing to offer vaccination to the poor wherever they reside, that there are such practical advantages in a designated station and time for performing this Sunday service in each neighborhood, especially as this will enable the physician to adopt the excellent practice of vaccinating directly from arm to arm. We give here the lists of these voluntary stations already established in the villages. The notice and advice concerning vaccination in the cities, which Col. CLARK will have posted to-morrow, will state what is desired concerning this duty in New-York and Brooklyn.

Accompanying the report of Dr. HARRIS was a communication to that officer from Sanitary Inspector JAMES, referring to cases of small-pox which had recently come under his observation. The Inspector said:

"In the evening of the second day of February information reached me that the small-pox had made its appearance in the industrial school in connection with the 'Home of the Friendless,' located in West Fifty-fourth-street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues; that two deaths had occurred, and several of the children were sick, creating considerable apprehension on the part of the managers and teachers. I was requested by you to visit the school without delay, obtain what information I could in regard to the matter, and report, as far as practicable, the appropriate measures for immediately arresting the spread of the disease. At 9 A. M. the next day I visited the school, found the facts to be as represented, and with the assistance of Assistant Sanitary Inspectors Drs. VIELE and HUDSON, proceeded to vaccinate all the children who did not show satisfactory evidence of previous vaccination. This course seemed to be justified by the fact that the school is composed of children of the very poor classes, who have no means of protection with epidemic disease, and also from the fact that of the 150 children in daily attendance, 101 were found who had never been vaccinated, thus presenting a fearful proportion exposed to the ravages of this loathsome disease. The work was subsequently continued by Dr. HUDSON, who visited the homes of the children and afforded vaccination to all who required it, thus arresting at once the progress of the disease among all connected with this industrial school. I have only to add that could free vaccination be secured to the poor, under the direction of the Board of Health, it would do much toward protecting our City from this dreaded disease, and contribute largely to the efficiency and public usefulness of the Board."

Assistant Inspector Dr. HUDSON'S record of 151 vaccinations in these poor quarters on the 3d and 4th of February was presented, showing that most of them were in tenements lying between West Fifty-second and West Fifty-eighth streets, Sixth-avenue and Broadway. Arrangements for free vaccination have been made throughout the suburban portions of the district as follows:

Stapleton, Staten Island, office of Dr. WM. O. MEAGHER, every day, 3 o'clock P. M.

Horse-Taming Exhibition.

When RAREY was giving his horse-taming exhibitions in this City and elsewhere, a few years ago, Mrs. Partington was not far out of the way in saying that he was a Rarey avis. Exhibitions like his were unusual, and in his method, and the manner of its application, there was something decidedly new. Since then every farmer's boy has "done" the Rarey with more or less success, and everybody that has anything to do with horses is familiar with the process. Prof. HAMILTON'S exhibition at the circus in Fourteenth-street yesterday afternoon was simply a demonstration of the ease with which a man can master a horse if he only knows how. Many will attempt to do what he and other horse-tamers do with such dexterity in public, and will fail, because they do not know the nature of the beast as well as he does, or, if they do, have not the same natural facility for taking advantage of it. Still, almost any man who is not afraid of a horse and can pull at one end of a string has the first requisites of a pupil anxious to acquire the art of horse-taming.

Prof. HAMILTON in the morning drove through some of the principal streets preceded by one of his trained horses, riding in a wagon, and by a circus van plastered with the advertisement of what he was willing to do in the horse-taming line, and the consideration demanded therefor. The horse which the Professor drove had no headstall and no reins. He obeyed the voice of his master, going to the right or left, standing still or advancing, walking at the word of command. A large crowd followed this novel procession wherever it went.

At 1 P. M. a large audience gathered in the Circus, in Fourteenth-street, to see the exhibition announced to take place there. After a little delay Prof. HAMILTON appeared in the ring, and successively exhibited the feats of four different trick-horses trained by him. This part of the entertainment presented no feature of startling novelty, but was very much enjoyed by the more youthful portion of the audience. One pony threw those who attempted to ride him, another picked up pocket-handkerchiefs, (although he was blind,) and as he could not see where he was going, fell his way with his forelegs. The first horse brought out for the purpose of being trained before the audience was a dark-brown animal with a somewhat vicious eye, but otherwise not terrible to behold. His principal failing was an aversion to being driven in single harness. The Professor fastened a cord about the horse's head, passed it through the animal's mouth, and slipped it through a loop attached to the surcingle, holding the end in his hand. The horse's left foreleg was strapped up, and he was allowed to jump around on three legs for awhile, and then the Professor, pulling the cord, brought him to the ground. By this process frequently repeated, by which the horse was taught to respect his power over him,—"to know which was the horse and which was the man,"—his unruly temper was soon overcome and he was driven in harness around the ring without difficulty. "But can I drive him to-morrow?" asked the owner of the horse. "Yes, any day you're a mind to," said the Professor.

A bunky pony was next taken in hands. His owner, who was present, being called on to state what the trouble was with this animal, arose and said: "I've owned this horse ten or twelve days. I bought him for a Bunky horse, and I'm all I bargained for." The pony received his laughter and applause. This horse did not fight very hard, nor did any of the others. He was soon perfectly tractable, of which Prof. HAMILTON gave the ocular proof, as he did with all the others, by lying down beside him, lifting the horse's hind legs and passing between them, standing on him, kicking him and otherwise defying him to exhibit a spark of his former spirit.

A bay horse was next brought out, whose difficulty was that he was afraid of an umbrella. Mr. HAMILTON speedily taught him to despise that implement, which was passed over his body, fastened to his head-stall while he trotted around, and held in the hand of the Professor, who, waving it boldly, stood upon the bare-backed and unbridled steed, and thus rode around the ring amid the plaudits of the people.

Finally another bay horse, which was not a remarkably beautiful animal, and was termed by the horse-trainer "a mullet-head," was called upon to take the floor. His owner, Dr. NEWELL, of New-Jersey, arose in the audience and said he bought this horse of a minister [laughter] who said that as far as he knew the animal was very kind. He (Dr. NEWELL) had to leave him in the road and go home on foot. The horse kicked the wagon to pieces and threw him into the road. [Laughter.] The lofty air with which this animal bore himself was speedily Rarey-fied, and he left for home a less mullet-headed and more tractable steed. This ended the exhibition. None of the animals were excessively wild, and the Professor's life at no time seemed to be in danger. He exhibited great coolness and a thorough command of himself and the horse, which was all that could be desired at such an entertainment.

Important Police Order—Change in the Hours of Patrol Duty.

Superintendent KENNEDY yesterday issued an order which is given below, and which has the effect of partially abrogating the order considered so vexatious by the Police Justices, by which prisoners were not taken to court until 9 o'clock A. M.:

NEW YORK, March 1, 1869.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 561.—Captain, on the 15th of March instant, you will change the hours of Patrol Duty as follows, viz.: Day duty will commence at 6 o'clock A. M., and end at 6 o'clock P. M. Night duty will commence at 6 o'clock P. M., and end at 6 o'clock A. M. Day Duty—First Tour from 6 o'clock A. M., to 8 o'clock A. M.; second tour from 8 o'clock A. M., to 1 o'clock P. M.; third tour from 1 o'clock P. M., to 6 o'clock P. M. Night Duty—First tour from 6 o'clock P. M., to 12 o'clock midnight; second tour from 12 o'clock midnight to 6 o'clock A. M. Captains of Police may (if the ability of their command to meet a sudden emergency will not be impaired thereby) allow the men (but one section at a time in turn) of the platoon that performed the first tour of night patrol duty, to go to their respective homes, after the midnight return call of the roll, and remain until it is time to report at the Station-house at 6 o'clock A. M., when they will relieve the section that went on patrol duty at 6 o'clock A. M., and patrol the precinct until 1 o'clock P. M. The section relieved at 6 o'clock A. M. will, with the exception of one hour for breakfast, and one hour for dinner, remain in the Station-house as a reserve force until 1 o'clock P. M., when they will relieve the section on patrol, and perform the patrol duty of the precinct until 6 o'clock P. M. The section relieved at 1 o'clock P. M. will, with the exception of one hour for dinner, remain in the Station-house as a reserve force until 6 o'clock P. M., when the platoon on day duty will be relieved by the other platoon. In sending time for the members of the platoon on reserve to procure their meals, care must be taken to retain, at all times, at least one-third of the reserve force at the Station-house. The Police Justices will not convene night patrol duty from 6 to 8 o'clock A. M., will not convey prisoners arrested by them during the evening or night tours to Court, until after being relieved at 8 o'clock A. M. (Police Justices may, if the requirements of the public service will permit) allow the men on the platoon relieved from patrol duty at 6 o'clock A. M., to go to their respective homes and remain (unless their service should be meanwhile required by the Department) until 6 o'clock P. M., when they will report for duty. The platoon that is to go on patrol duty at 12 o'clock midnight (with the exception of one hour for supper) must remain in the Station-house from 6 o'clock P. M. until 12 o'clock midnight, to secure that they may have sufficient rest to enable them to perform with energy the duties required of them by the Department. In case of fire in the precinct or any other emergency, in which the whole force of the precinct is required on duty, the section excused at 12 o'clock midnight, and the platoon excused at 6 o'clock A. M., will promptly report themselves to the Station-house for duty, without waiting for formal notice. You shall not permit any member of your command to be absent from duty except as provided in this order. Your Sergeants will go on and off duty with their respective platoons. In the lights when, in your discretion you may excuse one Sergeant, in turn, from night duty, you will perform his patrol duty for him during his absence. General Order No. 241 is modified so as to conform to this clause. This General Order to remain in force until the 15th of November next, when it will be suspended, and General Order No. 554 will go into force, unless otherwise ordered.

JOHN A. KENNEDY, Superintendent.

GEO. W. DILKS, Inspector.

Brooklyn Common Council.

The regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen of Brooklyn was held yesterday, Alderman CUNNINGHAM, President pro tem, in the chair.

A message was received from the Mayor vetoing the resolution previously adopted by the Board, directing the proper officers to enter into contract with FRANCIS SWIFT for repairing Fifth-avenue, from Flatbush-avenue to Thirtieth-street, with Belgian pavement, at $8 99 per running foot, because of the proposals received for regrading and repaving said avenue he found that of Mr. SWIFT to be the lowest, while the resolution only provides for the repaving and not the regrading of the avenue, from which circumstance there was danger that the owners of property along the line of improvement might refuse to pay, and the whole expense would then fall on the city at large. The message was ordered on file.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioner, setting forth that at various points in the streets of the city it would soon become necessary to set up warning signals, such as are on the skating-ponds, to prevent citizens from falling into the dangerous breaks so numerous. The Street Commissioner asks that immediate action be taken to remedy the evil. Referred to the Grading and Paving Committee.

The Corporation Counsel sent a communication, which set forth that PATRICK FAGAN, in an action against the City of Brooklyn for damages in breach of contract for grading and paving McDougal-street, the main issues in which action were tried by his predecessor, before Judge BARNARD, and the damages of which have been subsequently settled by a referee, has obtained a judgment against the City for $10,691 29. Counsel for FAGAN now propose to make a reduction from said judgment if the same is made without appeal, and he advises the Board to accept the terms and to authorize the Comptroller to pay the amount of the judgment. Referred to the Mayor, Comptroller, and Corporation Counsel, with power.

Alderman WHITNEY moved that all the street railroad companies in the city be requested to reduce their fares to five cents per passenger.

An effort was made by Alderman GUCK to have the subject sent to the Railroad Committee for the purpose of conference with railroad companies, but

The motion was carried.

The Water and Sewerage Committee reported in favor of the issue of permanent water loan bonds to the amount of $150,000 to build chimney, &c., for Engine No. 3, and for $350,000 for extending the distributing mains through the city. The report was adopted.

The Grading and Paving Committee reported against the laying of Nicolson pavement in Lee-avenue, E. D. The report was adopted.

The Board then adjourned.*

A Second Complaint Against Lee, the Stock Broker—He is Committed for Trial on Two Charges of Bond Robbery.

It will be remembered that some two weeks since EDWIN R. LEE, a stock broker residing in Bergen, N. J., was arraigned at the Tombs Police Court, charged with having stolen $40,000 in United States bonds from the office of the Star Insurance Company, at No. 96 Broadway, the proof against him being the alleged fact that he had offered some of the bonds for sale in the street. Upon this charge LEE has since been held in the Tombs pending an examination, but yesterday was taken into court and confronted with an entirely new complaint made by HENRY ROCHOLL of No. 69 Pine-street. This complaint alleges that on the 2d day of January last a tin box was stolen from the office of BIERWITH & ROCHOLL, which contained United States bonds and other securities valued at $50,000, which belonged to the firm and to their co-partners, EDWARD J. BIERWITH, LEOPOLD C. BIERWITH, SOPHIA ROCHOLL, STEPHENSON FORBES, FREDERICK A. JUNGS' SONS, LOUIS WIELMAN, Mme. DE ROEME and HERMAN STUTZER. These bonds, the complaint then alleges, were stolen by the prisoner, EDWIN R. LEE, and gives as a reason for the charge that ROCHOLL had been informed that ANDREW J. BIXBY had purchased of LEE, for FISK & HATCH, No. 5 Nassau-street, a portion of the stolen property, being United States bonds numbered 44,183, 44,184, 933, 5,275, 214,970, 238,485, 233,486 and 238,487. The complaint having been taken, ANDREW J. BIXBY was called as a witness and testified that acting for FISK & HATCH he had purchased from LEE in the office of that firm, and in the course of ordinary daily business, the nine United States bonds numbered in the complaint of ROCHOLL, six of them being for $500 each, two being for $100 each, and one being for $1,000, making a total of $4,200, and that he had paid LEE the current market rate for the bonds. In answer to this second complaint the prisoner pleaded not guilty, but Justice DOWLING determined to hold him for trial, and fixed the amount of bail required for his appearance at $50,000, which, in conjunction with the bail demanded in the case of the Star Insurance Company, makes a total of $90,000 bail required of LEE. The prisoner, not having furnished the requisite bail bonds, was recommitted to the Tombs to await a trial.

The Gas Investigation Committee.

The Legislative Committee appointed to investigate the management of the Gas Companies of New-York and Brooklyn, and to hear complaints about the same, held their first meeting at the St. Nicholas Hotel yesterday. Five out of the seven members of the Committee were present, as follows: PETER MITCHELL, Chairman; Messrs. LA BAU, HODGES, WEED and BERGEN.

The following resolutions were adopted, and the Committee adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock this morning at the same place:

Resolved, That Prof. DOREMUS and two other prominent chemists of the City of New-York be directed to make analysis of the gas furnished by the different Gas Companies, of New-York and Brooklyn, and report to this Committee at as early day as possible.

Resolved, That the officers of the different Gas Companies of New-York be summoned before the Committee, to answer such questions concerning the business of their Companies, respectively, as may be asked by the Committee, in the following order: Metropolitan, New-York and Manhattan.

Resolved, That the parties employed by the Gas Companies to take statements of meters be summoned before this Committee to answer such questions as may be asked them by the Committee.

Resolved, That this Committee respectfully invite Gas Companies in the City of New-York, and citizens generally, to attend before this Committee during its session, and give such practical information as may enable the Committee to take cognizance of grievances and complaints.

The first of the above resolutions was offered by Mr. WEED, the second by Mr. BERGEN, the third by Mr. MITCHELL, and the fourth by Mr. LA BAU.

The Committee will hold sessions daily during the week. Two members of the Committee are from New-York, one from Brooklyn and the other four from the country. The Gas Companies are represented on the Committee by Mr. BERGEN, who has been an employe of one of them for fifteen or twenty years, but as he claims to be the special champion of laboring men in the Legislature, it is not reasonable to suppose he will allow himself to be biased in favor of the gas monopolies.

FORTIETH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, March 1.

The Senate met at 11 A. M.

Mr. BAYARD presented the credentials of THOMAS F. BAYARD, Senator elect from Delaware.

Mr. VAN WINKLE presented the credentials of ARTHUR T. BOREMAN, Senator elect from West Virginia.

Mr. MORTON presented the credentials of WILLIAM G. BROWNLOW, Senator elect from Tennessee.

SUSPENSION OF RULES.

The House joint resolution suspending the 16th and 17th joint rules from now until the end of the session, so as to facilitate business, was agreed to.

BILL ON REFINING GOLD AND SILVER.

On motion of Mr. WILLIAMS, the Committee on Finance was discharged from the consideration of Mr. STEWART'S bill relative to refining gold and silver bullion in the United States Mint and branches.

COINAGE OF FIVE-CENT PIECES.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, reported the House bill to authorize the coining of nickel copper five-cent pieces, and stated that the Committee being equally divided on the subject could not make any recommendation in regard to it.

BILLS PASSED.

Mr. TRUMBULL called up the bill to authorize imprisonment at hard labor as punishment in certain cases, which was passed. Where the law simply prescribes imprisonment for offences against the United States, this bill authorizes a sentence of hard labor, at the discretion of the Court.

Mr. TRUMBULL also called up the bill relative to the rights of property of married women in the District of Columbia, which was passed.

RELIEF OF ALABAMA SCOUTS AND GUIDES.

On motion of Mr. SPRAGUE the bill for the relief of certain companies of scouts or guides, organized in Alabama, was passed.

BILLS AND MEMORIALS.

On motion of Mr. WILLIAMS, the Committee on Public Lands was discharged from the consideration of a large number of bills and memorials.

REMOVAL OF POLITICAL DISABILITIES.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Judiciary, called up the bill for the removal of political disabilities.

Mr. CONNESS moved to strike out the name of ASA ROGERS, of Virginia.

Mr. STEWART said there seemed to be a great difference of opinion in relation to the merits of Mr. ROGERS, and he would neither favor nor oppose the motion to strike out.

Mr. TRUMBULL opposed the motion, and asked Mr. CONNESS the reason for it.

Mr. CONNESS said it was because Mr. ROGERS was still an arrant rebel, and unfit to have the privileges of citizenship.

Mr. HOWARD said the man had been elected Second Auditor of Virginia, and merely sought relief so as to be enabled to hold the office without claiming to be a Union man.

Mr. TRUMBULL said that each of the persons named in the bill had made a written application for relief, in which he had expressed his intentions to obey the law and sustain the Government. Mr. ROGERS had done this, and that was not consistent with the statement of Mr. HOWARD.

Mr. WILLEY was unable to give any information about Mr. ROGERS' actions during the war, or his present attitude toward the Government; but he knew his reputation before the war to have been that of a gentleman of high character and standing in the community.

Mr. HOWARD read a letter indorsing the resolutions of the Grant and Colfax Club of Richmond, earnestly protesting against the removal of the disabilities of several office-holders in Virginia, among them Mr. ROGERS.

Mr. FERRY hoped the name of Mr. ROGERS would not be stricken out. He had observed that whenever a man holding office at the South applied for relief from his political disabilities there were always a sufficient number of his neighbors, who wanted the office for themselves, to get up a remonstrance.

Mr. TRUMBULL commented upon the fact that the Grant and Colfax Club of Richmond gave no reason against relieving Mr. ROGERS except that they (the Club) earnestly protested against it. If the Senate of the United States was to be merely a body to register decrees of the Grant and Colfax Club of Richmond, and elsewhere in the South, it was time the fact should be known. This Grant and Colfax Club protested against the relief of certain office-holders, probably because they wanted the office themselves.

Mr. TIPTON—They have a right to them.

Mr. TRUMBULL—Suppose the people don't want to elect them; have they a right to them?

Mr. HOWARD—They have, if the people are rebels.

Mr. TRUMBULL asked Mr. TIPTON whether he would like to have the majority of the people of Nebraska treated in that way.

Mr. TIPTON said that nothing would please him better, if the majority of the people of Nebraska were rebels.

Mr. CONKLING was not in favor of an indiscriminate removal of disabilities, but thought Mr. ROGERS, in consideration of his personal character and personal position, better entitled to the removal of his disabilities than many others who had theirs removed.

Mr. SAWYER thought the idea that no one at the South should have his disabilities removed unless it was recommended by the Republicans in his community, narrow, short-sighted, and radically wrong. Whenever a man of good character applied to have his disabilities removed, it would be the best policy of the Government to remove them, and thereby win the support of the conservative and influential men of the South.

Mr. NYE said that he had satisfactory information that the opposition to the relief of Mr. ROGERS, arose out of the fact that, as Auditor of the State, he stood in the way of the Governor's scheme to sell to outside parties the internal improvements of Virginia.

Mr. FRELINGHUSEN read the papers in the case of Mr. ROGERS, showing that he had taken the oath of allegiance, and avowed his intention to support the Government, and that the removal of his disabilities had been recommended by Gen. SCHOFIELD and Gen. STONEMAN, and leading members of the Republican Party in Virginia.

Mr. CONNESS, in view of Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN'S statement, withdrew the motion to strike out the name of Mr. ROGERS.

The morning hour having expired the bill went over.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS DISCHARGED.

On motion of Mr. SUMNER the Committee on Foreign Affairs was discharged from the consideration of a large number of bills, resolutions and memorials in relation to trade with Canada and other subjects.

SPANISH DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENCE CALLED FOR.

Mr. CONKLING offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the President for the correspondence during the last two years between the State Department and the United States Minister and the Secretary of Legation at Madrid.

THE ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the Army Appropriation bill.

The pending amendment was that offered by Mr. SPRAGUE, declaring the public domain within the jurisdiction of the United States, except that guaranteed by treaty to certain Indian tribes, to be the sole property of the United States, and the occupants thereof subject to the laws of the United States.

Mr. SPRAGUE explained the object of the amendment, which was, to bring the "wild" Indians under subjection to the laws of the United States, so as to do away, as far as possible, with Indian treaties. After considerable discussion, Mr. SPRAGUE, at the suggestion of Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, that his object would be attained in another way, withdrew his amendment.

Mr. WILSON offered an amendment providing that volunteer officers retired on account of disability, shall be retired upon the same terms as regular officers. Adopted.

Mr. MORTON moved to strike out the provisions limiting the number of Brigadier-Generals in the army to eight. The motion was lost by a vote of yeas 12, nays 29.

Mr. NORTON, of Minnesota, moved to amend so as to direct, instead of merely authorizing the President to reduce the army as rapidly as possible. Lost by a vote of yeas 9, nays 27.

The bill having been considered as in Committee of the Whole, was reported to the Senate, when Mr. SUMNER renewed his amendment to provide for the payment of the claim of Massachusetts for interest on advancements made to the United States in the war of 1812-1815.

Mr. CONKLING raised the point of order that the amendment having been already ruled out of order, could not be again offered.

Mr. SHERMAN took the same view.

Messrs. SUMNER and FESSENDEN insisted that as the previous action upon the amendment was in Committee of the Whole, it was not out of order to offer it again in the Senate.

The amendment was decided to be in order—yeas 25, nays 20.

Mr. GRIMES said that some interesting developments had already been made in connection with the proposition, and there were others equally interesting to be made. This was a claim for interest and for advances made by Massachusetts (then including Maine) in the war of 1812. He had never read that those States had been very zealous in carrying on the war of 1812. However, they had made some advances for the United States, which had been in due time repaid, and then after forty-seven years of deduction, they came to-day with a claim for interest, having first transferred the claim for the benefit of a railroad corporation, the directors of which had been on the floor of the Senate to-day, no doubt, enlightening Senators in regard to the merits of the claim. He wished the Senate to note, too, that when this claim was introduced, instead of being referred to the Committee on Claims or the Committee on Military Affairs, it went to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, upon which there happened to be a Senator from Maine, a Senator from Massachusetts, and a Senator from New-Hampshire.

Mr. SUMNER declined to discuss the conduct of Massachusetts in the war of 1812 because it had nothing to do with the question before the Senate. That question was simply whether provision should be made for the payment of a claim which had been twice passed upon favorably by Congress, and when paid would only put Massachusetts in this respect in the same position with other States.

Mr. DRAKE inquired whether, if this interest claim were now paid, it would not be a precedent for the payment of similar claims growing out of the war of the rebellion?

Mr. SUMNER was unable to answer the question more definitely than to say that if similar cases should arise the precedent would apply to them.

Mr. GRIMES moved to add a proviso that interest shall not be allowed to Massachusetts upon any sum on which she has not either paid interest or lost interest by a transfer to an interest-bearing fund.

Mr. SUMNER was willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. FESSENDEN, in reply to the suggestion that the claim, if valid, ought to have been settled years ago, said that it would have been settled at the same time with the claims of the other States, but for the fact that the Democratic Party, then dominant in Congress, singled out Massachusetts, and by delaying the payment of her claim, sought to punish her for the action of the Federal Party, by which she had been controlled at the time of the war. It had taken a great many years to get the principle, and Massachusetts was very glad to get it without, at that time, demanding payment of the interest.

Mr. HOWARD suggested that Massachusetts had failed to demand the interest within a reasonable time.

Mr. FESSENDEN replied that the interest had been claimed immediately after the payment of the principal.

Mr. HOWARD asked him whether there was any security that the money asked for would be appropriated to the construction of the railroad spoken of in connection with it.

Mr. FESSENDEN said that its use for that purpose was secured by the laws of Massachusetts and Maine.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN took the ground that the amount paid by the United States in 1839 was accepted by Massachusetts and Maine in full liquidation of the claim, principal and interest.

Mr. SHERMAN said that the proposition offered by the Senator from Massachusetts would appropriate over $6,000,000, and even with the restrictions proposed by the Committee on Foreign Relations would appropriate over $1,500,000. He had looked over the items constituting the original claim, and had found that nearly all of them were expenditures for local defence. The payment of the claim of Maryland for interest had been allowed because Maryland had at the time of the war appropriated a portion of her school fund (a trust fund) for the public defence; but Massachusetts occupied no such exceptional position, and if her claims were now allowed it would be impossible to pay claims that might be presented by other States for advances during the late war.

Mr. PATTERSON replied to Mr. SHERMAN, who, he said, had overstated the amount of the original claim.

At 4:30 o'clock the Senate took a recess until 7 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 7 o'clock.

On motion of Mr. SUMNER, the joint resolution to authorize Commander C. H. BALDWIN to accept a gold medal from the King of the Netherlands, was passed.

Mr. CATTELL called up the bill for the relief of PETER MCGOFF.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, called up the bill for the relief of the Illinois Iron and Coal Company, which was passed.

THE ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the Army Appropriation bill, the amendment offered by Mr. SUMNER being pending.

Mr. PATTERSON, of New-Hampshire continued his speech in advocacy of the amendment. He said the whole amount due Massachusetts and Maine under this claim was not a million and a quarter, as stated by the Senator from Ohio, but only seven hundred and sixty seven thousand dollars.

Messrs. DAVIS, DRAKE and HENDRICKS opposed the amendment.

Mr. MORTON advocated it. He believed that the States ought to be compensated for advances made in aid of the Government.

Mr. CHANDLER said the claim for interest was an afterthought and ought not to be allowed.

The debate was continued until 11:40 o'clock, when the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House met at 11 A. M.

Mr. CALLIS presented a memorial from citizens of Alabama for an increase of representation from Alabama in consequence of the extension of the elective franchise to freedmen.

BILLS READ AND REFERRED.

Under the call of States, bills were introduced, read twice and referred as follows:

By Mr. CALLIS—Granting lands to the Tennessee and Coosa Railroad Company. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

By SEVERAL MEMBERS—Bills to relieve persons named from legal and political disabilities.

BRIDGES ON THE OHIO RIVER.

Mr. COOK, from the Committee on Roads and Canals, reported a bill in relation to bridges across the Ohio River. The bill provides for the appointment, by the Secretary of War, with the approval of the President, of a board of scientific engineers, not less than five nor more than seven, to report to the next session of the Congress the proper width of spans of railroad bridges across the Ohio River, adapted to the wants of navigation and commerce, and that Congress take action on such report. No bridge shall be erected over the Ohio River unless it shall have one continuous span not less than 400 feet in width in the clear over the main channel of the river.

He moved the previous question on the passage of the bill.

Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, asked Mr. COOK if he would not allow him to say a word.

Mr. COOK—Not a word. [Laughter.]

The previous question was seconded, 70 to 42, and the bill was then passed—yeas 84, nays 59.

PACIFIC RAILROADS AND BRANCHES.

Mr. JUDD introduced a joint resolution in relation to the proper completion of the Pacific Railroads and branches, and moved the previous question on its passage. It authorizes and requires the President of the United States to demand and require from the Central Pacific Railway Company of California and their branches, bonds or other securities sufficient to guarantee the completion of such railroads and branches, and to bring them up to the standard fixed by the special commission that has examined and reported on the Union Pacific Railroad and its branches, and that is now examining the Central Pacific Railroad and its branches, applying the same standard of construction to each, and requiring the same security from each; and it directs the suspension of the issue of bonds to such roads until the report shall have been made.

The previous question was seconded—yeas 101, nays not counted; and the joint resolution was passed without a division.

THE INTER-OCEANIC RAILWAY.

Mr. RAUM introduced a joint resolution declaring valid certain declarations of the Constitutional Convention of Texas, corporating the Inter-Oceanic Railway Company.

Mr. BOUTWELL moved to lay the joint resolution on the table. Agreed to.

GEN. LEE'S WASHINGTON RELICS.

Mr. LOGAN offered a resolution directing the Committee on Public Grounds to inquire into the circumstances of the proposed return to Gen. ROBERT E. LEE of certain articles formerly belonging to Gen. WASHINGTON, which were taken from the Arlington House, and directing the Secretary of the Interior not to deliver them up until action has been taken on the report of the Committee.

The previous question was seconded.

Mr. WOOD asked the Speaker whether it was in order for the House to prevent the restoration of stolen property.

The Speaker said that that was not a parliamentary question.

The resolution was adopted—yeas 119, nays 35.

JOINT RULES SUSPENDED.

On motion of Mr. SCHENCK the sixteen and seventeenth joint rules, which prohibit the passage of bills from House to House, and the presentation of bills to the President within three days of adjournment, were suspended.

CHANGE OF HOURS.

On motion of Mr. SCHENCK, it was ordered that the House meet hereafter at 10 o'clock A. M.

Mr. SCHENCK moved to suspend the rules and to order that the House proceed to the business on the Speaker's table at 10 o'clock to-morrow.

The rules were not suspended—yeas 72, nays 70—less than a two-thirds in the affirmative, and the order was not made.

COTTON CLAIM ALLOWED.

Mr. BINGHAM, from the Committee on Claims, reported the bill to pay Mrs. SUSAN A. SHELBY, of Fort Gibson, Miss., $5,000, in full of all claims, for cotton captured and sold by the United States. After explanation by Mr. BINGHAM, the bill was passed.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, moved to suspend the rules, to discharge the Committee of the Whole from the further consideration of the Senate amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill, to non-concur in those amendments relating to new Indian treaties, to concur in the others, and to ask a Committee of Conference.

The rules were not suspended.

MISCELLANEOUS APPROPRIATIONS.

The House then, at 1:45 o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DAWES in the chair, on the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill.

Mr. SPALDING remarked that the bill was highly important and should be passed to-day. It involved the appropriation of about $6,000,000, mainly embraced in three items—the printing of bonds, Treasury notes and bank bills, the maintenance of revenue Cutters, &c., and the light-house establishment. He hoped the bill would have attention, and that but few amendments would be offered. The Committee, with an eye to economy, had exercised some liberality toward the administration that was to carry on the Government. He thought it had not reported too much, and he hoped it had not reported too little in the pending bill.

Mr. BROOKS called attention to the great expense of printing the public money, which had cost, since the beginning of the system, over $11,000,000, and for which this bill appropriated $1,300,000. It was time there was reformation in that establishment, and that the printing of the public money was removed from the Treasury.

Mr. PRICE moved an amendment appropriating $150,000 for continuing the work on the Rock Island Rapids.

After some discussion the amendment was rejected. A paragraph in the bill appropriating $300,000 for the construction of four steam revenue cutters for Alaska; for Columbia River, Oregon; for Mobile, Ala.; for Charleston, S. C., and for the transfer of the revenue-cutter S. P. Chase from the great lakes to Boston, Mass., elicited a lengthy discussion; its opponents contending that instead of building new vessels, some of the vessels now in the navy should be transferred to the Treasury Department for that purpose. The item was retained in the bill.

On motion of Mr. O'NEILL, supported by Messrs. MYERS and RANDALL, the appropriation of $2,000 for a preliminary survey of the site of the League Island Navy-yard was increased, after discussion, to $5,000.

On motion of Mr. SPALDING, representing the Committee on Appropriations, items for the Freedman's Bureau amounting to $214,000 were struck out of the bill.

Mr. KELSEY moved an appropriation of $5,000 to pay to Miss VINNIE REAM the amount due on her contract to furnish a statue of the late President LINCOLN.

After a brief discussion, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DODGE moved an appropriation of $229,848 to reimburse the State of Iowa for expenses incurred and payments made during the rebellion, as examined, audited, and found due by the Commission of Gen. BUCHANAN, which was rejected.

The same amendment, with a proviso, was offered again by Mr. WILSON, of Iowa.

After considerable discussion in support of the amendment by Messrs. DODGE, ALLISON, PRICE, and WILSON, Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, moved to amend the amendment by a proviso appropriating the amount necessary to pay the war claims of all the States that have been reported favorably by the Commissioners appointed by Congress.

Mr. WILSON accepted the proviso.

Mr. CLARKE, of Kansas, moved to amend the amendment by appropriating $2,519,000 for the Kansas war claims.

Pending the discussion, the House, at 4:30 o'clock, took a recess till 6:30 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The House met in evening session at 6:30 o'clock, the Speaker in the chair.

INVALID PENSIONS.

The first hour of the session was assigned to the business of the Committee on Invalid Pensions. A large number of private pension bills were reported and passed.

Mr. PERHAM, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported a bill relating to the operations of the Pension laws. After some discussion and amendments, the bill was passed.

It provides in the first section, that no claim of a widow for pension pay or bounty, shall be allowed where she has voluntarily lived separate and apart from her husband without receiving any support from him. It provides in the third section that all pensions granted in consequence of death from wounds or sickness contracted in the service, shall commence from the date of the death or discharge of the soldier, with a provision that nothing in the several acts relating to pensions shall deprive any person who was in the service of the United States between the 3d of March, 1865, and the 6th of June, 1866, of his pension during that period. The remainder of the bill is mere matter of detail, as to making proof, fees of agents, &c.

JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Mr. NEWSHAM, of Louisiana, introduced a joint resolution for giving the people of Louisiana the present Congress the right to nominate persons to fill existing vacancies from that State as midshipmen in the United States Naval Academy. Passed.

THE PUBLIC CREDIT BILL.

Mr. SCHENCK said that the bill to strengthen the public credit having come back from the Senate with two or three amendments, he proposed, by way of abridging the consideration of the matter, to ask the House to non-concur in these amendments, and asked for a Committee of Conference. He had no doubt that such a Committee would come to an agreement.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts—I object.

Mr. SCHENCK—I move to suspend the rules for that purpose.

Mr. SPALDING, who had the floor on the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill, declined to yield for that motion.

Mr. SCHENCK—Very well; I want it understood by the country that it is on the objection of the gentleman from Massachusetts that we cannot get at that bill.

Mr. BUTLER—And I want it understood by the country that the gentleman from Ohio cannot get at that swindling brokers' bill on the objection of the gentleman from Massachusetts. [Laughter.]

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DAWES in the chair, on the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill, the pending amendments being to pay the war claims of Iowa, Kansas, &c. That in regard to Kansas was rejected, and that in regard to Iowa, with Mr. BUTLER'S proviso added to it, was adopted.

On motion of Mr. LYNCH an appropriation of $25,000 was made for a light-house on Halfway Rock, Casco Bay, Maine.

Mr. BROOKS moved an appropriation of $200,000 for laying the foundation and commencing the building of the Post Office in New-York City, and spoke in support of the amendment, saying the importance of having the building commenced and carried on, and stating that the Government had purchased from the City for half a million dollars a site which was worth a million.

Mr. SPALDING, on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations, stated that the reason why the Committee had not recommended that or a larger appropriation was that there was dissatisfaction in relation to the site.

Mr. BENJAMIN opposed the amendment.

Mr. BROOKS reminded the gentleman from Missouri that the rent now paid for a Post Office and United States building in New-York was over $25,000 a year.

After further discussion the amendment offered by Mr. BROOKS was adopted by a vote of 78 to 42.

BANGOR CUSTOM-HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. PETERS, the appropriation for the Custom-house in Bangor, Maine, was increased from $15,000 to $25,000.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN KNOXVILLE.

On motion of Mr. MAYNARD, $50,000 was appropriated for United States buildings in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Mr. AXTELL moved to appropriate $250,000 for the Branch Mint at San Francisco. After arguments in support of the appropriation by Messrs. AXTELL and HOLLEY, the motion was rejected by a vote of 51 to 63.

Mr. AXTELL moved to appropriate $150,000 for that purpose, and after another appeal in support of the motion, it was agreed to by a vote of 61 to 54.

TERRITORIAL SURVEYS.

On motion of Mr. LOGAN, $10,000 was appropriated for the continuance of the geological survey of the Territories.

On motion of Mr. LOGAN, an appropriation of $3,000 was made for the purchase of a portrait of ABRAHAM LINCOLN for the White House, to be selected by the incoming President.

ALLOWANCE TO CONTESTING MEMBERS.

An amendment to pay several contesting members $2,500 each, gave rise to considerable discussion.

Mr. SCHENCK denounced the whole system of paying contestants, saying that it had grown to be a perfect nuisance, and that he did not know any more profitable business than contesting seats in Congress.

Finally it was agreed that the amendment should be offered in the House, and the Committee rose and reported the bill to the House. The House then, at 11:30, adjourned until to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

Commencement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The sixty-second annual commencement of this institution took place last evening at Steinway Hall, where a large audience was gathered at 8 o'clock P. M., when the exercises commenced. Dr. EDWARD DELAFIELD, President, conferred the degrees on eighty-seven graduates. Dr. JAS. C. LINDSLY, A. M., of the graduating class, delivered the valedictory address. Dr. DALTON announced the names of the successful competitors for the prizes. The awards of the prizes offered by the Faculty were as follows:

First prize to a thesis on "The Poisonous Species of Phus," by EUGENE B. MURTHA, A. M., of New-York City.

Second prize to a thesis on "Carbolic Acid and Derivations," by JOHN J. REID, of Ontario, Canada.

Honorable mention to LUCIUS D. BULKLEY, A. B., J. FRANCIS CHAPAN, THOS. TRENAMON, SHERMAN H. CHAPMAN, A. B., and GEO. B. HICKOK.

The Harson Prizes, consisting of $150, $75 and $25 each, were awarded as follows: First prize, J. FRANCIS CHAPMAN; second prize, EUGENE B. MURTHA; third prize, FRED. C. CURTIS.

It was announced that the Stephens Prize had not been fairly earned by any one, and would be awarded next year.

Mr. JOSEPH H. CHOATE delivered the final address to the graduating class—a humorous effort, which kept the audience in a roar, and then the assemblage was dismissed with a benediction.

Meeting of Sunday School Librarians.

A meeting of librarians of the different Sunday Schools of this City, including several from the suburbs and from Philadelphia, took place last evening at the Tabernacle Church, corner of Broadway and Thirty-fourth-street. Mr. A. L. SAYRE, of the Northwest Presbyterian Church, corner of Thirty-first-street and Ninth-avenue, was in the chair, and Mr. C. A. CORBETT, of the Madison-avenue Baptist Church, was Secretary. The object was to form a permanent organization, in order to examine into the respective merits of the libraries of the different Sunday Schools throughout the Union, and suggest such improvements as might be thought desirable. Committees on permanent organization, books, catalogues, a library system, library cases and public libraries, were appointed, and an adjournment took place subject to call.

Aylette Medical Institution Commencement.

The commencement exercises of this institution took place yesterday evening, at University Chapel. Prof. J. C. DRAPER presided, and made an address to the graduates. The salutatorian was Dr. S. S. ALEXANDER. The valedictory was delivered by Dr. R. P. TOWNSEND, of Kentucky. Dr. F. D. BENEDICT, in behalf of the class, presented Dr. AYLETTE with a gold watch, and the latter responded with feeling. Degrees were conferred on forty students, pupils of Dr. AYLETTE.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

Yesterday was the coldest day of the season, with one exception—the 24th of December, when the mercury fell to 11° above zero. Yesterday, at an early hour in the morning, it was 12° above zero. At noon it had risen to 25°, at which point it stood till night, when it again fell several degrees.

Yesterday morning, at about 11 o'clock, while a carriage was proceeding from the office of Dr. BEDFORD, the brother of the Judge, a man who was standing near, began an assault on the vehicle with paving stones, of which he had a good quantity at hand, having evidently gathered them for the purpose. Several of the missiles passed through the window into the carriage, and one of them struck Dr. BEDFORD on the side of the head. The assailant was taken into custody and locked up to await an examination. It is supposed that the attack was made by the stranger under the belief that Judge BEDFORD was in the carriage.

MARION GOLDEN, of No. 122 Baxter-street, yesterday afternoon fell from the roof of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad Freight Depot, and being crushed between two freight cars, was severely injured. He was taken to the New-York Hospital.

JOHN REYNOLDS, of No. 433 East Sixteenth-street, was caught yesterday afternoon in the machinery of the hair factory No. 512 East Seventeenth-street, and was seriously injured. He was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

WILLIAM HADDON, of No. 223 East Fifty-third-street, fell yesterday, when stepping from a Third-avenue car, at Fifty-fifth-street, and was seriously hurt. He was assisted to his home.

DENNIS KELLEY, a child 4 years of age, died yesterday at No. 171 Monroe-street from injuries received by falling from a fire escape, on the 19th ult. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest, and a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

From the statistics of Ex-Fire Marshal BAKER it appears that the losses by fire in this City, during the month of February, amounted to $273,800.

Sunday night two men were observed in Eleventh-avenue, near Twenty-seventh-street, each carrying a large bag, and when hailed by the Police they dropped the bags and ran away. The bags were found to contain large quantities of spool silk and thread, which are supposed to be the proceeds of a burglary. The property is held at the Twentieth-street Station-house for identification.

A meeting of the New-York Society of Practical Engineers will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock, at Room No. 24, Cooper Institute. The practical aspects of aerial navigation will be discussed.

We have been informed that our publication in Sunday morning's issue in reference to Mr. C. D. ROBINSON having "absconded" from the City with the securities of WOOD & ROBINSON, was incorrect, and that he is now at their office, endeavoring to settle up matters satisfactorily. This explanation is due to Mr. ROBINSON under the existing circumstances of the case.

Neither branch of the Common Council met yesterday afternoon, in consequence of the Committee appointed to proceed to Washington to have the City of New-York reimbursed in the sum of $800,000 for moneys expended through the Union Defence Committee during the years 1861 and 1862, in fitting out troops, being at Washington looking after this matter. It will be remembered that this Committee consisted of five members from each branch of the Common Council, Alderman COULTER being the Chairman.

An adjourned meeting of the pupils of old Public School No. 7, from the years 1806 to 1846, under the principalship of Dr. STEPHEN R. KIRBY, WILLIAM P. LYON and JOHN W. KETCHAM, will be held at the school-house on Friday next, at 3 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization.

Last evening a fight occurred in the liquor saloon of HERMAN BRUNS, No. 315 Bowery, between THOMAS MULHOLLAND and JOHN HYATT, during which the former was stabbed by HYATT in the face and hand, making severe but not dangerous wounds. HYATT immediately escaped, and the wounded man was removed to a neighboring drug store, where his injuries were attended to.

ELLEN FARRELL, of No. 226 East Twenty-third-street, was arrested yesterday by Officer INMEN upon a charge of stealing a piece of poplin from the store of A. T. STEWART & CO., corner of Broadway and Tenth-street. She was locked up in the Mercer-street Police Station-house.

Brooklyn.

Rev. T. DEWITT TALMAGE, of Philadelphia, has accepted the call of the Central Presbyterian Church, and is expected to begin his ministrations there next Sabbath. His salary will be $7,000.

Some private citizens have arranged to present the Captain of the Inman steamship City of Brooklyn with a silver trumpet, made by one of the Brooklyn silversmiths. The cost of it was $300. It will be presented about the same time as the set of colors from the Corporation. It is a massive and elegant affair, solid silver, gold lined, mounted with nautical emblems in frosted silver, with an engraving of the ship on the outer side of the mouth; on the inner side will be a suitable inscription. The City of Brooklyn is expected to arrive on Saturday next, and come to Brooklyn on the Tuesday following, anchoring at the foot of Montague-street, when the presentations will be made.

The Supreme Court yesterday confirmed the report of the Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment on the widening of Vanderbilt-avenue, from Atlantic-avenue to Prospect Park. The total cost of the improvement is $1,222 30. It gives an additional width of thirty feet on the east side of Vanderbilt-avenue, making the avenue one hundred feet wide from Atlantic-avenue to the plaza of Prospect Park, and making it the grand approach to Prospect Park from the central part of the city. Twenty-five awards for compensation for land and buildings have been made, amounting to $164,474, of which about one-half—$81,237 20—is for buildings, and the other half for land. The scale on which the land has been valued is that of allowing $4,000 compensation for 25 feet front on Vanderbilt-avenue, and 100 feet deep. The city gets the largest award—$28,000—for the 30 feet slice cut off from Prospect Park before reaching the border of the plaza.

At a late hour on Sunday night the fancy store of A. & J. N. WOODWARD, No. 656 Myrtle-avenue, took fire. The stock was damaged to the amount of $1,000; insured for $2,500 in the American Insurance Company. The building, owned by J. BLATCHFORD, was damaged to the amount of $500; insured in the Nassau Company.

New-Jersey.

The old stone house at Sufferns, known as WASHINGTON'S headquarters during the time of the Revolution, has been thrown down to make way for other buildings. A photographer has taken a number of views of the ruins.

A verdict of accidental death was returned last evening by the Coroner's jury in the inquest on the body of Mrs. BINN, resident of Carlstadt, Bergen County, who was killed near the Turnpike on Saturday last, by an Erie Railway train.

The residence of Mrs. MAPES, at Waverly, was broken into on the morning of Saturday last, and several valuable paintings and other articles stolen therefrom. The thieves gained entrance into the parlor by breaking out the glass in a window on the north side of the house. One of the pictures represented "Sunset on the Water," and the other was the portrait of an old lady in white headcap and black dress.

CHRISTOPHER LASCHE, a grocer, doing business at No. 48 Grand-street, Newark, was arrested, on Saturday last, for having forged the name of JACOB WERNER to a promissory note for $200, payable in six months, on JOSHUA S. SLOCUM. The prisoner was committed for trial after a partial examination; but, on being removed to jail, he escaped from custody, and has not since been heard of.

Republican primaries will be held at Orange on Tuesday next, and the Town Convention on Monday.

There was skating in the Newark Rink last evening.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

CAREY AND HART, Philadelphia.

This well-known publishing house has for nearly a quarter of a century been engaged in the production of a class of books which, while not ostensibly religious, are of a high moral character, and which, without being obtrusively sectarian, are thoroughly imbued with the principles of the Christian religion. Their publications are not numerous, but they are generally works of merit, and are issued in a handsome style. Among the recent publications of this house are the following:

"Lectures on Preaching," by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. 12mo, pp. 320. This volume contains the substance of the course of lectures delivered by Mr. Beecher before the Yale Theological Seminary, in the autumn of 1871. The lectures were delivered extemporaneously, and without any notes, and are reported by a gentleman who was present at the delivery. They are characterized by the same vigor of thought and style which distinguish Mr. Beecher's published sermons, and will be found interesting and instructive by all who are engaged in the work of the ministry, or who are preparing for it.

"Sermons," by the Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D. 12mo, pp. 320. This volume contains a number of sermons preached by Dr. Brooks during the past year, and is published in response to a general request from his numerous friends. The sermons are characterized by the same vigor of thought and style which distinguish Dr. Brooks's published sermons, and will be found interesting and instructive by all who read them.

BUSINESS IN THE COURTS YESTERDAY.

The Supreme Court Circuits, with the exception of Part III., did very little business yesterday, beyond impaneling jurors and taking a few inquests. In Circuit, Part I., held by Judge INGRAHAM, about nineteen jurors, out of the one hundred summoned, answered to their names. The calendar was called through, but no cases being ready for trial, the Court ordered a fresh panel of fifty jurors for Wednesday, the 3d inst.

In Circuit, Part II., held in the General Term room, by Judge G. G. BARNARD, only five jurors answered to their names on the first call. The number summoned was one hundred. Afterward three more jurors came to and were accepted, but eight are not enough to try a case. After taking a few inquests Judge BARNARD adjourned his Court until Tuesday morning, after directing a new panel of one hundred jurors to be summoned from both of the Common Pleas branches the non-attending jurors were fined $25 each.

In Supreme Court Circuit, Part III., Judge CLERKE was presiding in the libel case of Reade vs. Sweetser, &c., which was commenced on Friday last. Fifty extra jurors have been ordered for this branch for Wednesday, before which time it is expected that the libel suit will have been terminated. Judge CARDOZO will hold this circuit during the remainder of the month, and Judge CLERKE will preside at a special Term, which has been adjourned to Wednesday morning, when the calendar will be called.

The calendar of the Supreme Court Chambers is very heavy. Judge SUTHERLAND is holding this branch in the small and fifty-ventilated room in the Sprague stone building. If both branches of the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas a sufficient number of jurors were obtained to proceed with trials in each. In Part I. of the former, at the opening of the Court, the jurors having answered to their names, about fifteen or twenty out of the thirty-four present advanced to ask to be excused. Before hearing the excuses to any, Judge BARNARD stated that he thought it his duty to call their attention to the great difficulty experienced in obtaining jurors. This may be regarded as one of the most imperative and important which a citizen can be called to perform. Any one of them, the rights or property at stake would deem it all-important that his case be heard before the most intelligent and trustworthy of his fellow-citizens, and what they desired for themselves in the hands of their fellow-citizens and neighbors, they must be willing to accord to them under like circumstances. They must not, therefore, feel aggrieved if he refused to excuse any of them except for most cogent reasons.

Some few were excused until to-morrow morning, and two excused for the term—one for imperfect understanding of the English language, and the other for physical defects which rendered him incapable of serving. A large number were also fined in this and the other branches of the Courts for non-attendance.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

MARCH 1.

Before Judge Barbour and a Jury.

Thomas Lawson vs. Chester Gerrish.—In this action [illegible] to recover the sum of $1,100, for which plaintiff held Vatot's notes. Vatot had a quantity of goods amounting to over $900 in the hands of defendants, for sale on commission, and desiring to secure plaintiff in his debt, made out a bill of these goods, and added thereto a memorandum, in which he stated that he "released" to the plaintiff Vatot's interest therein. The maker of this paper and the plaintiff in whose favor it was, went together to the store of defendants, and there it was agreed that the goods should be transferred to plaintiff. Defendants promised to have the memorandum signed and delivered according to that understanding, and in pursuance of that promise did subsequently pack the goods in a trunk with a view to delivery, but refused to do so afterward. Action was now brought by plaintiff for the delivery of the goods or their value. On behalf of defendants it was contended that the paper in question did not, under the statute of frauds, transfer title to the property; and also that a constructive delivery was the deposit of the notes with defendants, which condition had not been complied with. The Court, in charging the jury, held that, in its judgment, the paper in question did not constitute a contract under the statute of frauds, but that it was for them to determine whether the acts of all the parties at the interview when the goods were promised to be measured off and packed, did not constitute a transfer of the property and a constructive delivery under the statute. The jury, after a short absence, rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $667 70, the value of the property with interest.

Charles H. Smith for plaintiff; Peter Y. Cutler for defendants.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Judge Bedford.

This Court commenced the March term in the remodeled Court-room. The room has been enlarged one-third by the removal of a wall, refrescoed, repainted and refurnished throughout. Justice, therefore, took her new seat, exhaling not only an odor of sanctity, but likewise an odor of new carpets, black-walnut and linseed oil.

The roll of Grand Jurors was called. Mr. D. M. Gurnure was instructed to act as foreman, and the oath was administered by the Clerk of the Court. Judge BEDFORD then delivered his charge, as follows:

JUDGE BEDFORD'S CHARGE.

Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:

The fulfillment of the oath this moment administered to each and every one of you will prove a true guide for the faithful performance of the duties devolving upon you, which have been summed with unlimited power to protect the community in their rights, and to be instrumental in meting out promptly and swiftly the penalties prescribed by the Legislature for the violation of the laws. Your duty is a simple one. You are to investigate, thoroughly, all complaints placed before you by the learned District-Attorney. Your object is to see that justice be done the State, no matter at what cost, be the consequences what they may; and yet, at the same time, you should have a care that no injustice be done the accused. In these days of excitement and lawlessness, it is important to bear in mind that the accused has his legal rights as well as the community. Whenever the evidence warrants it, I feel confident that you will act promptly for the protection of the people. Crime is on the increase, and must be checked. The times demonstrate the fact, that it has now become a standing battle between the authorities and the evil-doers. It is a fight, and it is time, between law and justice on the one hand and crime and criminals on the other. And the people look to the authorities for protection; let them not look in vain. Let every one of you, during hour years himself worthy of the people's confidence. Let not a single man prove traitor to his oath. In order to facilitate the administration of justice, I deem it my duty to call your attention to the Penal Code of Procedure, prepared and framed several years ago by Messrs. David Graham, Jr., William Curtis Noyes, Alexander W. Bradford and David Dudley Field. And here, gentlemen, permit me to throw a passing flower on the honored memories of Graham, Noyes and Bradford; for they were, indeed, bright luminaries of our noble profession, and although, having passed away to the undiscovered country from "whose bourne no traveler returns"—and for which have left "their footprints on the sands of time." By their labors they have attained a niche in the great temple of Fame of no mean or equivocal character, and have left an example worthy of imitation, such as to honor and ennoble our profession. I am pleased to say that the fourth gentleman, Mr. David Dudley Field, standing as he does in the first rank, is still with us for future usefulness. I am strongly in favor of adopting this "Criminal Code," believing that it will be instrumental in removing many impediments now standing in the way of the administration of the most delicate branch of law—criminal jurisprudence. For many years past, and at every session of the Legislature, he has labored for the adoption and passage of this worthy work, but without success, and I am inclined to believe that the real reason was, that some of the members of the past Legislatures have been composed of men who, judging others from the perpetration of similar outrages, as honest and so determined in their endeavor to check crime as are the officials, then, indeed, we might all hope, and not in vain, that crime would be promptly and readily controlled. While on this topic of jurors, their duties and responsibilities, permit me to direct your attention for an instant to a recent trial, fresh to our memories, and in doing so I wish to be distinctly understood that in referring you to this case, I do not desire to create one member's wrath or ill-will or prejudice against the unhappy man; far be it from me to harm a single hair on his head! His cup of bitterness is, indeed, full. May he, while in his lonely cell, during the brief period which is left for his earthly existence, make his peace with his God, and be ready for a future and, I trust, a happier world. My only object in alluding to this melancholy case is to draw a comparison between the conduct of the Judge and District-Attorney on the one hand, and of the jurors on the other, in the trial of this case. Twelve intelligent men were summoned as jurors, vested with the exercise of the highest prerogative known to man, viz., to sit in judgment on the life or death of a fellow-man, upon the most momentous issue which can be presented for human adjudication—the issue of life or death. Pledging themselves to the State to be guided by the testimony and that alone, at the same time, you should have a care that no injustice be done the accused. In these days of excitement and lawlessness, it is important to bear in mind that the accused has his legal rights as well as the community. Whenever the evidence warrants it, I feel confident that you will act promptly for the protection of the people. Crime is on the increase, and must be checked. The times demonstrate the fact, that it has now become a standing battle between the authorities and the evil-doers. It is a fight, and it is time, between law and justice on the one hand and crime and criminals on the other. And the people look to the authorities for protection; let them not look in vain. Let every one of you, during hour years himself worthy of the people's confidence. Let not a single man prove traitor to his oath. In order to facilitate the administration of justice, I deem it my duty to call your attention to the Crimin
